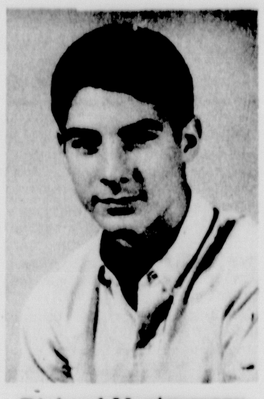
Eight Representatives From Sikeston To Attend Boys State



Richard Montgomery

Phil Barkett

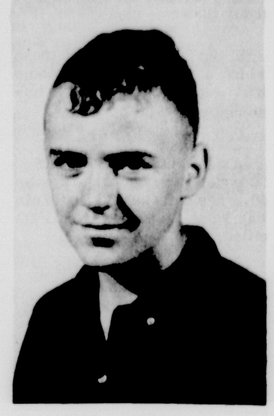
Larry Barger

Kenneth Henry

Fred Lumsden

Tommy Pallus

Gary Williams



Mike Critchlow

Sikeston will sent eight representatives to the 1965 Missouri Boys State to be held on the Warrensburg College Campus during the week of June 12-19. Accompanying the local youths will be two from this area.

A Dexter high school bus will arrive at the Rustic Rock at 6 p.m. sharp, June 12 to pick up the local students, and transport them to Cape Girardeau, where they will join two chartered busloads of candidates for the nine hour ride to Warrensburg. The boys will leave Warrensburg at 10 a.m., June 19.

Richard Montgomery, son of Mr. and Mrs. Joel Montgomery, Hy. 61 north, sponsored by First Methodist Church Bible class;

Phil Barkett, son of Mr. and Mrs. Phil Barkett, 118 W. Wakefield, sponsored by Rotary Club;

Larry Barger, son of Mr. and Mrs. Gene Barger, 810 Wayne, sponsored by Coalesce Club;

Kenneth Henry, son of Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Henry, 520 Lake, sponsored by Junior Chamber of Commerce;

Fred Lumsden, son of Mr. and Mrs. Donald Lumsden, 731 E. Kathleen, sponsored by Lions club;

Tommy Pallus, son of Mr. and Mrs. Herman Pallus, 502 Lanning, sponsored by Kiwanis club;

Gary Williams, son of Mr. and Mrs. Marcus Williams, Rt. 1, Sikeston, sponsored by Women Civic Club and Lewis Furniture Co.;

Mike Critchlow, son of Dr. and Mrs. W. C. Critchlow, 721 Park, son

Park, sponsored by Daily Standard;

Gordon Waller, son of Mr. and Mrs. Jack Waller, Malden, sponsored by Semo Voiture 460-40 and 8;

James Lee Hewitt, son of Mr. and Mrs. James C. Hewitt, Morehouse, sponsored by Morehouse Kiwanis club.

Boys State facilities for the week of training on the Warrensburg campus will find 840 candidates gathered, with the Posts of the American Legion responsible for making the Boys State a representative of worthy boys from all communities over the state. These boys are then sponsored by community organizations, who are chosen for their leadership, courage, honor, loyalty and service, and recommended by their school principal.

Boys State is purely an educational program, and not a picnic, an outing or a recreational camp. The boys have their own city, county and state government, and elect their own city, county and state officials. They learn the duties of all public officials, introduce and argue their own bills in their own legislature. It is an opportunity for every boy to learn for himself that his government is just what he makes it.

Interest High Toward Vance-Whitworth

Following publication in yesterday's Daily Standard of an expanding new manufacturer's proposed move to Sikeston, interest is running high among local townspeople.

Possibility of major portions of the activities of Vance-Whitworth, Incorporated, being relocated here is closer to reality today with many local businessmen offering assistance with the capitalization and site acquisitions necessary prior to the move.

Many telephone calls have been received by both the Standard and the Chamber of Commerce offices concerning the pending move.

J. W. Hartzog, C of C president, revealed that he had received a letter from the Board of Directors of the presently-based St. Louis firm which he said contained information that further clarified the company's plans.

This letter from the Board of Directors of Vance-Whitworth read:

Mr. J. W. Hartzog, President
Chamber of Commerce
Sikeston, Missouri

Dear Mr. Hartzog:

We at Vance-Whitworth are most pleased and gratified at the interest and support our Company has received in the Sikeston community through the five years of our existence, particularly in the last few months. Inasmuch as it now appears that this interest and support will enable our organization to acquire the capital financing and the plant facilities necessary at this stage in our growth, our Board of Directors has met to review the encouraging developments in this area and to consider our future here in Sikeston.

In this meeting of the Board, it was resolved that certain activities of the Company be brought to Sikeston in their entirety beginning July 1, 1965. These activities include our Manufacturing Plant and our Product Engineering, Quality Control, Fiscal Service, Planning, Scheduling and Administrative Services departments.

This early date for the relocation of these activities was selected because the Board felt the continuing high acceptance of the Company's data recording equipment and data processing services make it vital that decisions be made without delay to assure that production and developmental growth keep pace with sales efforts and marketing possibilities. The Board further authorized the officers of the Company to establish negotiations for plant sites for interim and long-term purposes.

We look forward to a long and mutually profitable association with this community, and we forward you this letter as a testimonial of our intention and desire to become a part of your community and take our place as an active corporate citizen.

Sincerely,
Vance-Whitworth, Incorporated
President Ray M. Whitworth
Chairman James M. Vance

Southeast Missouri Press Association Kicks Off

THE 73rd Southeast Missouri Press Association business session opened at 10:30 a.m. today with the Rev. William Stewart of Farmington as the speaker, giving a necrology report. Officers seated at the table were, Dennis Bacon, Senath, secretary; Barney Miller, Dexter, treasurer; and Art Wallhausen, Sr., the host publisher, Charleston. Other speakers were, Bill Bray, Missouri Press secretary; Frank Hecht, advertising manager, state association; S. S. Graf, state press vice-president, and Dean Earl English, school of journalism. Shown above are members of the press present for the opening meeting.

For the 73rd time, Southeast Missouri has gathered for a get-together of the district newspapermen and women. Today, the Charleston Enterprise-Courier, with its publishers, Mr. and Mrs. Art Wallhausen, junior and senior, are hosts with the meeting at the Holiday Inn.

The morning meeting consisted of a business session with reports from Secretary Dennis Bacon and Treasurer Barney Miller, followed by a necrology report by the Rev. William Stewart.

State Press officials, Bill Bray, S. S. Graf, and Dean Earl English, all of Columbia, wound up the business session.

The luncheon was held at 12:15 p.m. with the Charleston publishers as hosts, with the Rev. Robert Jaye, humorist, as the speaker. The afternoon session began at 1:30 with a discussion of the Commercial Code by Secretary of State James C. Kirkpatrick. Frank Hecht, Columbia, discussed the national advertising highlights.

At 2:45, Cliff Edom, professor of photography spoke on "Photography and Your Newspaper." The afternoon session wound up its business session with reports from the nominating committee and resolutions committee. A social hour was held at the Holiday Inn, beginning at 5 p.m.

The banquet will open at 6:15 p.m. in the main dining room, to hear an address by the editor of the Carlow (Ireland) Nationalist, Liam Bergin, who is on leave for six months study at the Southern Illinois University, Carbondale, Ill. The 1965-66 officers will be installed, followed by the presentation of special awards, with President Harry L. Denman, presiding. Special music will be provided.

Fulbright Named To Board Of Human Rights

JEFFERSON CITY (AP) — Gov. Warren E. Hearnes today reappointed Forrest P. Carson of Jefferson City as chairman of the state Commission on Human Rights and appointed four new members.

Carson, 55, is a Jefferson City attorney.

These other members were named:

Joseph L. Ames of St. Louis, secretary-treasurer of Local 410, American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employes AFL-CIO, to replace Norris H. Allen of St. Louis.

Mrs. Reba Schinault Mosby of St. Louis, an educator and consultant in human relations, to replace Howard Woods of St. Louis.

William P. Murphy of Columbia, a faculty member of the University of Missouri School of Law, to succeed Hugh Phillips of Camdenton.

Republicans Catering To Cities

KANSAS CITY AP -- The Republican party's only hope for effectiveness in Missouri is to win more votes in the metropolitan areas, state Rep. R. J. King Jr. of St. Louis said Thursday night.

Reapportionment of the Missouri House will leave Kansas City and St. Louis only two votes short of a majority, King told about 1,000 persons at a dinner for William O. Buffe, retiring Jackson County Republican chairman, and his successor, Richard L. Berkley.

Republicans will lose many seats in rural areas through reapportionment, King added.

The party, King said, can no longer afford the luxury of losing 99 per cent of the Negro vote, 95 per cent of the labor vote, and 98 per cent of the vote of minority groups.

"We must change our methods somehow," he said. "I don't know the answer. Somehow we must change the picture.

Son Knows Daddy In War Is Dead

By JOY MILLER
AP Women's Editor

FAYETTEVILLE, N.C. (AP) —The telegram lay on the round coffee table in the living room.

From his cardboard rocket ship, Stephen, 5, would glance occasionally at the strange yellow piece of paper, then at his mother on the sofa. She wasn't crying. She was just sitting there motionless, staring ahead.

With an air of decision he marched to the table and picked up the telegram. The words "The Secretary of the Army regrets to inform you that your husband—" meant nothing to him. But he knew.

Eyes wide with wonder, he turned to his mother. "My daddy is dead, isn't he?"

Ei Young, Japanese wife of Staff Sgt. Horace Young, newly dead in Viet Nam, stifled a cry and gathered her son to her. It was to be her only public expression of grief. Friends, chaplain or even her older son, Jesse, 8, when he came home from school, would see none.

Across town in a section of several hundred mobile homes called Trailertown, about a 10-minute ride from Ft. Bragg, a pretty young woman packed methodically.

She was going home to Phenix City, Ala., where her mother had been keeping her 8-month-old daughter since the funeral two weeks before.

No Summer Class At Malden Center

MALDEN — No classes will be held this summer at the Malden Residence Center, according to an announcement made today by Lyman Evans, director of admissions at Southeast Missouri State.

Interest was apparently lacking in the nine courses to be offered during the summer session, the number of those signed up generally falling far short of the minimum of 15 required for each class, Evans said.

Information was sent to the high schools in the Malden area regarding the summer classes, and notices were carried by news media of the Bootheel. Registration was held here on Friday, April 30, and Saturday, May 1.

Richland Schools Will Have Integration For New Term

ESSEX-- The Board of Education of Richland School District R-1 of Stoddard County has been notified that the district's plan of desegregation to meet requirements for compliance with Title VI of the Federal Civil Rights Act of 1964 has been tentatively approved for the 1965-66 school year.

This plan includes the following primary conditions:

1. All pupils of the district in grades 9-12 will attend Richland High School during the 1965-66 school year.

2. All pupils of the district in grades 7-8 will attend Richland Junior High School during the 1965-66 school year.

3. All pupils of the district in grades 1-6 will be given a choice of the school they will attend during the 1965-66 school year enrollment. Class loads and transportation routes being the only limiting factors in this choice.

Letters explaining this choice and blanks for a reply by parents or guardian have been sent to all parents by their children.

Replies must be returned to the school of their choice or to the office of the superintendent of the Richland Schools not later than June 3, 1965.

If no reply is received by June 3, the child will be assigned to the next higher grade in the same school he or she is attending this year, provided of course, that the child is promoted to the higher grade.

Kennett Endorses 'Sound Of Music'

KENNETT — The Kennett Chamber of Commerce, in executive session, has endorsed and commended the Wednesday Music Club of Kennett for its successful efforts in bringing "Sound of Music" to Kennett this coming Saturday.

The Kennett Wednesday Music Club is sponsoring the Sikeston Little Theatre Group's presentation of the long-run Broadway hit by Rodgers and Hammerstein as a part of their observance of National Music Week.

The Chamber of Commerce is commending the Kennett club because of the cultural benefits available to Kennett in having the opportunity of attending fine wholesome entertainment as will be seen and heard in "The Sound of Music."

The musical production will be presented at 8 p.m. Saturday at the Kennett High School auditorium with Mrs. Joann Ashbaugh Fox directing the music and Mrs. Hope Terrell as drama director.

Voting Rights Bill Put To A Vote

By JOHN CHADWICK

WASHINGTON AP -- Senate Democratic Leader Mike Mansfield sets the machinery in motion today for ending debate on the voting-rights bill and putting it to a vote.

Joined by at least 31 senators --there may be additional late signers--Mansfield will file a petition that seeks to limit each senator to an hour's speaking time on the bill and all its amendments.

The petition comes to a vote Tuesday. If two-thirds of the senators voting follow the leader, cloture will be applied and, Mansfield hopes, the bill can be brought to a vote by week's end.

Except for the petition filing in early afternoon, not much action was expected on the administration-backed measure today. It's a Friday and many members of Congress find it hard to resist a long weekend.

Last year the cloture rule was invoked successfully for the first time to cut through a filibuster against civil-rights legislation.

Republican Leader Everett M. Dirksen said Thursday he thinks enough senators will vote for cloture this time and that the debate limitation will open the way for passage of the bill next week.

Dirksen told newsmen he thinks at least 24 of the 32 Republican senators will vote to end debate. If they do and if all 100 senators vote, it will take 43 of the 68 Democrats to stifle Southern talk against the bill.

Southern senators have been fighting the legislation with words and with proposed amendments, contending it would deprive states of their constitutional right to fix voter qualifications.

They have refused to enter into any agreement to limit debate and bring the bill to a vote. However, much of the time the Senate has spent on the legislation since it came to the floor April 22 has been taken up by a dispute among its supporters over poll taxes.

The bill provides for the suspension of literacy and similar voter qualification tests in five

Cease-Fire Scheduled

By ROBERT BERRELLEZ

SANTO DOMINGO, Dominican Republic (AP) — A 24-hour cease-fire between junta and rebel forces was scheduled to start at noon today to permit removal of dead and wounded from Santo Domingo's battle-torn northern suburbs.

The Red Cross and the United Nations negotiated the agreement to suspend the five-day battle which has caused a death toll estimated at more than 100.

"I have every hope that this 24-hour cease-fire will be permanent," Dr. Luis F. Fernandez Martinez, president of the Dominican Red Cross, told a newsman.

But the junta president, Brig. Gen. Antonio Imbert Barrera, whose forces have cut deep into rebel positions in the northern part of the capital, vowed to carry his attack into the main insurgent stronghold in downtown Santo Domingo. He hinted this would happen next week.

Rebel spokesmen acknowledged that their northern forces were being encircled with their backs to the Ozama River.

Imbert told a newsman: "It is now too late for a permanent cease-fire such as the United Nations and the Organization of American States have been trying to arrange."

"We have renewed our military operations and they cannot be stopped," he declared.

Troop E Reports Two Highway Injuries

Two injuries in a single accident occurred in the entire Troop E area Thursday, when at 4 p.m. two cars met at an unmarked intersection on a county road eight miles south of Puxico. John Capps, 84, Dexter, and Maggie Hardin, 27, Dudley, were the drivers. Capps received a leg and hip injury, while Steven Hardin, 5, a passenger in the Hardin car, received a lacerated tongue, but not serious. There were three minor accidents over the entire area.

Three In City Court

In a short City Court session held by Judge E. R. Schrader three cases were brought before him, two of which were dismissed.

Edward Banski, Hot Springs, Ark., charged with public drunkenness, failed to appear in Court and had $25 bond forfeited.

Acy Hobbs, 213 Young, charged with disturbing the peace by use of loud and profane language had case dismissed.

SIX EMERGENCIES

Six persons were treated and dismissed from the emergency room of the Missouri Delta Community Hospital yesterday.

Ricky Carmack, Sikeston, bumped head in P. E. class at school.

Danny Isenhower, Sikeston, hurt arm playing baseball.

THE MASONIC HALL dining room was filled at all times for the annual barbeque and fish fry held after 4:30 p.m. Thursday. The eating went on continuously except for Mr. and Mrs. Bill Depro, Matthews, who looked up with a satisfied smile at the time this picture was taken. Other customers go about their task of filling up at the tables.

1500 Attend Masonic Feast

More than 1,500 persons took advantage of the annual Masonic Lodge Square and Compas Club barbeque and fish fry Thursday afternoon and evening, according to Phil Waldman Jr., general chairman, and was an increase over any previous affair in several years. There were also 514 carryout lunches.

The serving started at 4:30 p.m. and lasted to 8:45, when all barbecue chicken and fish faded away. It was learned that at the very end 14 persons were turned away.

The excellent menu of chicken and fish furnished amounted to 1,125 halves of chicken, and 650 pounds of fish, with all of it consumed before closing time.

Side dishes included 1000 pounds each of potato salad, beans and slaw, with a desert of ice cream and pie, coffee and cold drinks for all present. An added assortment of fresh green onions was also available.

To the readers of our columnist Victor Riesel, the dramatic labor message sent up the Hill by President Johnson came as no surprise. Mr. Riesel was ahead on this story with a series of exclusives which began as early as Mar. 12 -- fully nine weeks ago.

On that day Mr. Riesel alone reported the details of a closed-door session in Mr. Johnson's White House office attended by the President, some of his key aides, and several labor leaders.

It was at this session that the President outlined what he would and would not put into his labor message.

These were details eagerly sought by labor leaders, businessmen and the public -- since the message would affect tens of millions of people and tens of thousands of businesses.

In his March 12 column, Mr. Riesel revealed that the President had promised he would include the demand for repeal of Taft-Hartley clause "14 B"; that he would seek extension of coverage of the minimum wage law to additional millions; that he would push for double time for overtime, but he would not ask for a shorter work week.

Riesel said then that the President would urge a study of the latter. President Johnson's message completely corroborated Mr. Riesel's exclusive report.

USRLA -- RED PLAN FOR LATIN AMERICA

Defectors from the Soviet side to our side in the world conflict should be an important force. For many years, with the Naval Intelligence and with State and U. S. Senate committees, I had the responsibility of inducing wavering communists and people in the twilight of their communist careers to come over to the side of the United States. I know what a magnificent contribution defectors have made to our understanding of the communist conspiracy. They made valiant witnesses, and the whole free world was better for their testimony.

In recent years, however, the people running our executive policy have not shown the high resolve necessary to induce defections. Many of us were shocked in 1958 when we learned that a Danish international civil servant, Povl Bang-Jensen, had been approached at the U.N. by a cluster of potential Soviet defectors who asked that he aid them to asylum in the United States. The approach had been made at the time of the crushing of the Hungarian uprising by Soviet tanks in 1956.

These defectors told Bang-Jensen that the 38th floor of the U.N. (the top administrative offices) was actually under Soviet control and that the Soviet Secret Police had penetrated our Foreign Intelligence. This information was dispatched to the then head of our CIA, who, instead of zealously moving to acquire the vital secrets available from this important source, let Bang-Jensen and the defectors cool their heels for seven anguished months, after which they were no longer available.

I read in the Congressional Record of September 24 another startling defector story. It comes through an interview between the competent foreign editor of the Washington Star, Constantine Brown, and a former high official of the Communist Czechoslovak government. The defector told Brown much about communist future plans which we should know.

The defector left communism because he could no longer stand the intrigue involved. However, since his defection he had come to realize he had joined "the losing side" because the leaders of the West, mostly in the United States and Britain, refused to believe that Khrushchev is planning to conquer the world.

He told of a communist plan, blueprinted and sealed during Castro's 37-day visit this summer to the U. S. S. R. that called for the success of what is called in the Kremlin -- the USRLA -- the United Socialist Republics of Latin America. By 1968 this Soviet unit is to include Cuba, Venezuela, Colombia, Brazil, British Guiana, Mexico, Chile and Hispaniola. (This was before the overthrow of Juan Bosch.)

Castro, according to the defector, is to be the leading force, but let Constantine tell the rest:

"According to my informant, Khrushchev has instructed Castro to lay the groundwork without haste. It is essential, he is reported to have said, that the chances of re-election of the present Washington administration, sympathetic to socialism, and dedicated to a relaxation of tensions, should not be endangered. It is also important that the British Labor party, headed by Harold Wilson -- described by Khrushchev as a man of great intelligence and insight toward world trends -- should replace the wobbly, uncertain and tired Conservatives.

"Hence, there must be no hasty or rash moves by Fidel and his associates through Latin America. Castro must accept with good grace any indications for reconciliation with the United States -- even at the price of some concessions regarding the confiscation of American properties.

The testimony of this defector, properly checked, should be brought to the attention of the world, not hidden in the Congressional Record. Our official policy is working to bring about a merger with this country and the nations of the world under the United Nations. Under this, we would be a minority; but if the Latin American bloc is to be put into the Soviet side of the aisle, we will be almost a solitary voice in the consensus. By Robert Morris

PIDGIN ENGLISH CABLESE IS MONEY WISE UNFOOLISH

The desire to save words, and therefore money, in telegrams and cables has created a form of pidgin English among foreign correspondents and their editors, the Catholic Digest has learned.

"Canst," for example, is cheaper to say than "Can You?" and the prefix "un" serves for any kind of negative.

One editor wanted to tell his correspondent that, according to news agencies, riots had broken out near Timbuktu and air passage should be booked at once. "Agencywise riots outbroken Timbuktuwards canst proceed airwise query." The reluctant correspondent cabled back: "Viewing story unfolded Tuesday unthink coverage newsworthy." The reply, however, was, "Proceed soonest." Answer: "Send $100 urgentest."

Another lazy correspondent received the cable: "Why unnews query." He cabled back: "Unnews good news." His office replied: "Unnews unjob."

No news wasn't good news for one isolated reporter. So he cabled one word: "Boo." The instalt reply: "Boo or unboo you onstaying."

One newspaper asked its reporter for the age of the Governor of his district. "How old Brown," it read. Peeved because he knew the data was available in Colonial Office files, the newsman cabled back: "Old Brown fine how are you."

HOW LONG IS A YARDSTICK?

A top spokesman for the National Rural Electric Cooperative Association urges that the federal government more than triple its power production by 1980 as part of a plan to provide the American consumer with an effective yardstick to measure and control power rates.

A fundamental question immediately arises. If such a plan were approved, how long would be the yardstick?

As of now, the existing alleged "yardsticks" are short indeed. The Tennessee Valley Authority, for instance, pays no federal income taxes, relatively small sums in lieu of local taxes and has various other special privileges which are paid, directly or indirectly, by the taxpayers at large.

The REA co-ops pay no federal income taxes and borrow money from the Treasury at about half the rate the Treasury must pay on its own long-term borrowings. Again, we have direct and indirect taxpayer subsidies.

So the story goes, all the way down to the municipal systems. In every case, the publicly-owned operations have important financial advantages which are denied the heavily-taxed, publicly-regulated, investor-owned utilities.

The "yardstick" concept is meaningless and worse --unless all power supplies, public and private, operate on precisely the same basis.

NEW FOLDER FEATURES PROTESTANT VIEW

An educational folder entitled, "The Protestant Belief Embraces Right to Work," is being prepared for nationwide distribution by the National Committee. Written by Dr. Frederick C. Fowler, Pastor of the First Presbyterian Church of Duluth, Minn., the folder is attractively designed to stimulate the interest of the nation's millions of Protestants. It is the second of a series begun with Father Coogan's statement, "Pope John and The Right to Work."

At an Iowa University dance a med student standing at the foot of some stairs looked up at the sound of clicking heels to see a coed friend descending. As she reached him, he said, smiling, "I hear you're pregnant."

"What!" she gasped. "When did you learn that?"

"Just now," he whispered, "when I heard the pitter-patter of your little feetus."

You may not be able to legislate morality, as the well-worn saying advises, but it should be possible to eliminate some of the trouble people sometimes find themselves in because they acted morally. That appears to be the consensus of a group of 11 lawyers, philosophers, sociologists and others who met in a Good Samaritan Symposium at the University of Chicago.

In recent years, a number of cases in which human beings in mortal danger were ignored by onlookers have aroused the public conscience. At the other extreme, acts of Good Samaritanship have resulted in physical injury, financial loss or law suits for those who performed them.

While some countries -- France, Germany and the Soviet Union, for example--have "bad Samaritan" laws making it a crime to fail to aid persons in distress when this is possible, the symposium questioned their workability.

No law cannot ordain courage, heroism or self-sacrifice. The law could, however, provide compensation for Good Samaritans or exempt them from legal action by those they attempt to help. (In some states, doctors rendering emergency treatment are protected.)

As law professor Charles O. Gregory of the University of Virginia put it:

"I suppose there is much to be said for the old Anglo-American attitude of minding your own business--except as that the world changes, the other people's business in more and more ways becomes yours."

PROPERTY TAX STILL MAINSTAY

Although constantly on the lookout for new revenue sources, local governments still depend on the property tax as a principal revenue source, says Tax Foundation.

Nineteen years ago, total state and local tax collections amounted to $10 billion; $5 billion represented collections from the property tax, according to the Foundation's new, 13th edition of Facts and Figures on Government Finance, 1964-65.

In fiscal 1963, total tax collections were $44 billion, more than four times the 1946 figure. Of this amount, $20 billion came from property taxes.

It is estimated that total state and local government collections in fiscal 1964 will be between $47 billion and $48 billion, up 470 percent since 1946!

In the years 1946-1963, property tax collections increased just over 300 percent; collections from sales and gross receipts taxes increased nearly 400 percent, said the Foundation. Figures for 1946 and for subsequent selected years:

TAX RECEIPTS EQUAL $2,600 PER FAMILY

The average American family's share of the total taxes collected in fiscal 1964 by all levels of government approximated $2,600, says Tax Foundation, Inc. In fiscal 1963, the per family share was $2,493.

Total government (Federal, state and local) tax receipts in fiscal 1964 are estimated by the Foundation at $158.4 billion, up almost $10 billion over fiscal 1963.

PASSED $100 BILLION In 1965

As total government tax receipts move upward from the $150 billion point, the Foundation, in its new, 13th edition of Facts and Figures on Government Finance, 1964-65, points out that it was in fiscal 1956 that total tax receipts first passed $100 billion.

One of the new book's 190 tables shows that state-local tax receipts amounted to about $32 billion in fiscal 1958; in 1964 they are estimated at $51 billion.

Tax receipts by selected years, by level of government, and on a per family basis, follow:

F.Y.	Tot. (in billions)	Fed.	State & Local	Total Per Family (in 000's)
*1964	$158	$107	$51	$2.6

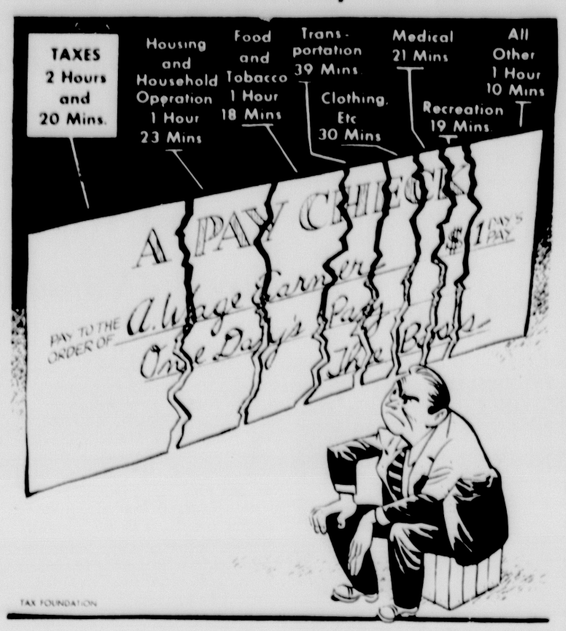
Tax Bite in the 8-Hour Day



Americans work 2 hours and 20 minutes of every 8-hour day just to meet their Federal, state and local tax bills, according to Tax Foundation, Inc. estimates. This is more time than is required to meet other costs shown in the cartoon above.

H. L. Hunt Says

WHO, ME?

A couple went to call on their new neighbors. As they entered the door, a grimy little boy playing in the yard rushed in with them. He turned somersaults in the floor, meddled into everything available, and even went uncorrected when he broke a vase and spilled water over the carpet.

Curbing her anger the hostess asked: "How old is your little boy?" "Our little boy?", they gasped. "We thought he was yours!"

We sometimes bend over backward when the Communists and atheists provoke us to wrath, thinking it is somebody else's duty to put them in their places, when that "somebody else" is wondering the same about us. If we had all been patriotic enough we would have made a concerted protest against atheist Madalyn Murray when she incited the Supreme Court to take Bible reading and prayer out of our schools, and tried to have our National motto, "IN GOD WE TRUST," removed from our coins. Instead, we did nothing until the damage was done.

American tourists tell us that every 100 miles throughout Russia, there are road signs showing their motto, and a serene, studious woman reading a big, black book, one hand on the book, the other on a child at her side. The book has taken the place of the Bible. It was written by Karl Marx or Lenin. These road signs thrust themselves in the faces of travelers advertising to the world that Russia's religion is Communism.

We want someone to do something to save our country. It is so stupid that they don't. We would do it ourselves if we could just get started.

Inside Labor

By Victor Riesel

President Stakes Global Prestige On Labor Message

Washington, D. C.:--To keep his promise to his labor friends and allies, President Johnson has waded into the first prestige-making fight with Congress he's not certain he can win.

His move to repeal the laws banning union shops came at a risky moment in global history. Any defeat in the Congress on any major issue will hurt him abroad.

But he could wait no longer and still keep his pledge ot the union chiefs in this session of Congress. His action is a mark of his personal -- and political--respect for them and the high place they have in his administration.

He moved cautiously. He avoided the crises. He shied away from sending his labor message up during the dock and steel industries' uproars. He outwaited the scandal over the wrong count in the International Union of Electrical Workers' presidential election.

He consulted with George Meany and the labor leaders in a series of closed-door conferences and private telephone calls.

In a long intimate talk with Meany during the height of the Dominican crisis, Mr. Johnson outlined his strategy. The President wanted to avoid anything which would divert him from international affairs.

But the time had come for the move on the labor front. If the President hesitated "the season would be over," as they say inside labor. A secret poll of Congress showed that the Senate was with them--and they had a 10 vote majority in the House.

Introduction of the bills now would bring action on the Hill about July 1. Any delay would force debate to run into the climax of the steel negotiations at the end of which there still may be a national strike.

So, Mr. Johnson unloosed his proposals for slashing excise taxes. The move should keep business happy. A cut in taxes would stimulate sales on everything from cars to color TV receivers.

Then at ten o'clock the next day the press was briefed on the labor message. At noontime the doorkeeper in the House called out, Mr. Speaker, I have a message from the President. Mr. Johnson, as usual, had tried to give something to both sides.

But many businessmen are not happy. They are saying that the rest of the President's message will cost them billions more in payroll taxes and increases. And they are emotional about repeal of the "right-to-work" law.

They've been preparing for this fight for a long time. It will rage. They may beat down the razor-edged labor margin in the House.

Labor's lobbyists already are flocking in. But even as they converge on the Congress, the union chiefs are seeking new vistas. What will they urge next?

A hint of this is in an unreported telegram dispatched to the President recently by Hunter Wharton, the mild ice-cream-soda-drinking president of the powerful Operating Engineers Union. The wire urged the President to appoint a special task force immediately to begin planning a vast Mississippi River Flood Control Authority.

Wharton told the President that his union colleagues felt that a master plan should be drawn up speedily for a network of dams and reservoirs which would match the TVA.

The union, which is one of the strongest in the AFL-CIO Building and Construction Trades Union Council, believes that if billions can be spent abroad to aid other nations in similar projects, certainly similar funds should be spent at home. The expenditure of billions would, of course, not only end the threat of floods--such as the recent disaster which killed 15 persons and destroyed $200 million worth of property--but would also create scores of thousands of jobs.

This is but one bid for huge public works which soon will have the entire labor movement behind it.

Another campaign can be expected to boost a bill introduced by Minnesota's Congressman John Blatnik calling for a $2 billion public works program. As the AFL-CIO research people see it, the money would be spent for construction of museums, libraries, public buildings, repairs of streets and the laying of sewage systems.

And when the next Congress rolls around, labor again will seek the President's aid in a drive for a new minimum wage of $60 a week--and a shorter work week at that.

But first things first. And the first thing is to organize their legions behind the President, right now.

CAMP GIA VUC, South Viet Nam AP -- Some U. S. soldiers regard Viet Nam as a muddy wasteland which they hate the whole time they are here.

Others fall in love with the land and its people and try to perform a real service during their tour of duty.

He has been a one-man goodwill mission among 3,000 inhabitants of 12 straggling hillside bamboo hut hamlets. America probably doesn't have a better liked envoy than this young "Mayor of Poverty Flats."

In several weeks of whirlwind activities Lt. Damewood has done these things:

Set up two dispensaries and taught villagers the rudiments of sanitation.

Organized and provided books for a 40 people school for children who had never been in a class room.

Arranged a program under which the villagers can exchange their rude crossbows and other handicraft items for tools, cloth, blankets and hardware.

"They are also planting family gardens for the vegetables they need to vary their diet," Damewood said. "And we are also planting some 500 fruit and nut trees, and starting other projects to provide them with fish ponds and help raise the quality of their pigs and rabbits."

The lieutenant gives out 4,800 bars of soap each month. He pointed at a flapping laundry line stretched between two huts.

"You never used to see that here before," he said. "Many of the children now are brushing their teeth regularly. We are trying to get them to realize that most of their diseases are caused by dirt and lack of hygiene.

"Out theme is that self-sufficiency is the first step toward self-government. And these people show a real willingness to improve their lot.

"Our goal is to get these betterment programs going so well that when we pull out, the villager will be able to make a go of things themselves without further assistance."

Damewood's pride is the "New Life Hamlet," a community of 175 huts built from scratch to house 750 Montagnard tribesmen driven from their homes farther north by Viet Cong guerrillas.

"We provided the materials, but they put up the houses themselves," he said. "They have a wonderful spirit. You can't help liking and admiring them."

There are an estimated 750,000 of the mountain tribesmen in South Viet Nam.

"I think the future of the country may depend on whether they stay with the government or swing to the Viet Cong," he said. "These people here are staying with the government and risking their lives to do it."

Washington-Merry-Go-Round

By Drew Pearson

WASHINGTON — There is only one agency of government which has paid any attention to Gen. Eisenhower's farewell message to the American people warning of the alliance between big defense contractors, retired generals and admirals, and the Defense Department. That agency is the General Accounting Office.

During the last fiscal year alone, the General Accounting Office submitted 144 reports on improper military spending. They checked into everything from subsidizing golf spectators to squandering money on dress shoes and pants with pocket flaps.

This is the inside reason why defense contractors have pulled wires with Rep. Chet Holifield, the onetime liberal Democrat from California, and induced him to investigate the General Accounting Office. Irony is that Holifield's subcommittee is charged with policing military mismanagement and waste. It is supposed to work with GAO, not against it.

GAO's unsung accountants pursue the disappearing tax dollar through the maze of defense contracts as no congressional committee ever does. They search for hidden profits, watch for misspent money, check all the fine print in defense contracts. Scarcely a defense industry has escaped their eagle eye.

1. Fort Gordon was revealed to have been providing cutrate accommodations for military brass who come to Augusta, Ga., to watch the annual Masters golf tournament. Visiting officers are charged as low as 40 cents for a room in the Bachelor Officers' quarters, up to $2.50 for family accommodations. (Commercial rates in Augusta during Masters week run about $20 a day.) The Army also has been furnishing free transportation to the golf course, cocktail parties after a hard day on the links, and daily towel service.

2. The Navy was found to be spending an unnecessary $158,000 a year, simply because the admirals had refused to give up their brown dress shoes and wear only black shoes like the general.

3. The flap over pants flaps was caused by Army-Marine failure to settle on one style of pants. The GAO complained that it cost the taxpayers an extra $68,000 to supply trousers both with and without flaps on the hip pocket.

—THE WEAPONS MAKERS—

The GAO has been roughest, however, on the weapons makers. They have been taking the biggest bite out of the taxpayers, and one GAO report last year charged that the Navy had spent a staggering $445,400,000 with the Glenn L. Martin Company over a 10-year period, yet had not received a single serviceable P&M seaplane for its money.

The GAO also accused Bethlehem Steel of collecting $5,000,000 more than its cost figures justified for the construction of the nuclear frigate NS Bainbridge.

In another report, GAO jumped on the Aluminum Company of America for charging the Air Force and exorbitant 51 per cent mark-up for aircraft forgings. Boeing was also accused of pocketing $2,203,450 too much on its Bomarc missile contract.

—TRIBUTE TO MME. PERKINGS—

The last survivor of the Triangle fire died last week. She was 83-year-old Frances "Fanny" Perkins, FDR's Secretary of Labor and one of four national figures who, like Phoenix, rose from the ashes of the Triangle fire.

That fire, which in 1911 roasted to death 145 people at their work in New York City's Triangle Shirtwaist factory, shocked the world. It also awakened the United States to horrible working conditions in sweatshops, and started a crusade for reform.

The leaders of that reform were Al Smith, who became governor of New York and ran for president in 1928; Franklin Delano Roosevelt, who also became New York governor, and was elected President in 1932; Robert Wagner, born in Germany and father of the present mayor of New York, and who as Senator from New York State sponsored the Wagner Act, the NLRB, and the most important labor legislation in history; and Frances Perkins, who became Secretary of Labor. She served longer than any other Secretary of Labor in history, and was one of the most criticized.

I was among her critics. She took the criticism philosophically, and, as I look back on her career, I feel rather mean about my criticism.

For, in the whole, Frances Perkins was a dedicated, devoted public servant. Before she died, I said so. And I salute her memory now as one of the four greats who from the ashes of tragedy built a better America.

The Modern Christian

If love is really the most powerful force in the world, where is it?

A tear is not sorrow, a falling leaf the autumn, nor a footprint the walking man. They are signs. And signs are often rich in their complexity, since they point to multiple dimensions of present, past, and future.

Each day the modern Christian sees thousands of "signs" that tell him of the upward thrust of life and the downward movement of death. A true reciprocity is necessarily involved in both.

Man is a sign of rich diversity and counter trends.

Yet, the Christian has an inwardness that cannot be measured, mechanized or packaged. The functional, the lucrative, the immediate payoff, the here and now are too often the pursuit of Christians. Balance in the currents of life and death is different to come by.

The Christian person is the unique sign in the world of today. He is fully human and the Spirit operates withim him.

A kiss, for example, is a sign. It is a sign of love. The kiss of Judas was one of death. That which is behind the sign, the reality itself, can be twisted and distorted.

It is tragic when a Christian is a sign of death rather than a sign of love.

Meadow Lane Garden Club Meets With Mrs. Lennie Whitworth

Meadow Lane Garden Club met for the May meeting with Mrs. Lennie Whitworth. Present were 11 members and two guests, Mrs. Mark Weston and Mrs. L. Schuerenberg who were welcomed into the club as new members.

Mrs. Ruth Lee presided for the business meeting. Mrs. John H. Calvin, secretary, submitted information which was approved. Special reports consisted of the following: Mrs. M. H. Davis presented the schedule for the October Flower Show entitled "Time For All Things" to be given by Sikeston's Meadow Lane and Rose Gate Clubs assisted by Sikeston's Men's Garden Club. Program chairman Mrs. E. H. Weidemann presented plans for a summer workshop during June, July and August in preparation for the Fall Show and a Wild Flower trip and picnic for the members.

Mrs. Lee commended members for their community work in assisting various organizations and churches with arrangements of flowers or foliage for special occasions. Those having participated in various ways were Mrs. Lennie Whitworth, Mrs. John H. Calvin, Mrs. M. H. Davis, Mrs. E. H. Weidemann, Mrs. Lenzie Beck and Mrs. Ruth Lee, in addition to the fact that the Club had assisted Rose Gate Club in preparing table and room arrangements for the Arts Festival Banquet recently held at the Holiday Inn.

Mrs. Lee reminded the group that now is the time to start gathering plant material for dried arrangements. Also, that she and Mrs. Davis would present a Flower Arranging program on May 28 to the Matthews Extension Club, Matthews, was mentioned. The Club voted to send a letter of appreciation to City Manager Raymert Miller and the City Council for the Ordinance recently made effective banning dogs from the streets. This move will be greatly appreciated by all gardeners.

The program chairman, Mrs. E. F. Weidemann, presented a film on propogation by seed of many familiar flowers. She was assisted by Mrs. John H. Calvin and Mrs. Lenzie Beck.

For the social hour members held a "White Elephant Sale" with Mrs. Lennie Whitworth conducting the selling. Meeting adjourned with members eagerly anticipating the resuming of regular meetings next September.

AIR CONDITIONING

When you purchase your unit from your dealer, please remember

WE RECOMMEND - - -

(1) 220-volt units if possible. (these require separate circuits usually)

(2) Notify us or have your dealer to, as we may need to install a new service or a larger transformer.

(3) Don't wait until the unit won't run; this may delay the necessary work to make the unit operate

(4) Your dealer or electric contractor can always call us, so that everything can be ready when you want service.

(5) If you are thinking about air conditioning, plan now! Don't wait until the hottest day!

Cardinals Down Phils 12 to 2 Gibson Wins His 8th Straight

The swinging bats of the St. Louis Cardinals pounded 13 hits Thursday to give Bob Gibson his eighth victory without a loss this season and a 12-2 defeat of the Philadelphia Phillies.

Julian Javier and Lou Brock hit back-to-back doubles to open the five-run first inning. Curt Flood then cracked his sixth home run, Bill White singled and Phil Gagliano sent an inside-the-park homer sailing into center field.

Gibson followed that inning with a hit of his own. He took second when Brock was hit by a pitch and both flew home safely on Flood's double. Brock also accounted for another two runs in the four-run sixth when he slashed a two-run single up the middle.

Gibson, meanwhile, had a shutout going into the ninth before Tony Gonzales homered to drive in John Briggs, who had walked. But the big right-hander then retired the side and killed any Philadelphia hopes of evening the four-game series.

St. Louis, which now has won 18 times, including seven of the last eight, will send Curt Simmons 1-5 against New York tonight in the first of a three-game series. The Mets plan to use Jack Fisher 3-3.

Kansas City, which was idle Thursday, opens a three-game series in Minneapolis-St. Paul tonight. The A's Diego Segui 2-4 will face the Twins' Camilo Pascual 4-0.

Don Carr's high series at 712 was the first 700 series in league play at the new Imperial Lanes and the highest ever bowled in Sikeston District Bowling Association. Carr also had a 709 series this year in another league, to make him the first bowler in Sikeston that has ever bowled Two 700 series in one year. Carr had already bowled a 708 in 1961 at Bluff Lanes in Poplar Bluff. This makes Carr one of the few, if not the only, bowler in this area that has three 700 series to his credit.

Rudolph Takes Lead In $60,000. Memphis Open

MEMPHIS, Tenn. AP --Mason Rudolph and Bob McCallister, the first-round leaders in the $60,000 Memphis Open, are two brave men on a golf course but a lad who has been a pro less than a month had them shaking in their shoes today.

That rookie's name is Homero Blancas and he is the odds-on choice to be golfing's Rookie of the Year after just four tournaments.

Blancas, a 27-year-old University of Houston graduate, trailed Rudolph and McCallister by one stroke going into today's second round. Rudolph and McCallister both shot 65s in the first round Thursday, while Blancas and two others finished with 66s.

In his debut as a pro, Blancas picked up $2,425 for a seventh-place finish in the Houston Classic. He then tied for 16th in the Texas Open and won $875. Last week at New Orleans, he was among the leaders all the way and finished in a tie for seventh for $3,200 in prize money.

There has been no man in the history of the professional game who has started so fast.

Others at 66 were Julius Boros and George Archer.

Jack Nicklaus blew a chance to tie for the lead when he three-putted the 18th green and finished with a 67. Others who fired 67s were Dave Marr, Kel Nagle and Jack McGowan.

In all, 35 players broke par Thursday and 10 others equaled it.

Mickey Wright Leads At Dallas

DALLAS, Tex. AP --Mickey Wright has a different slant on this business of being tensed up when you start out in a golf tournament in your home town.

"It was best that I felt that way and took a bogey on the first hole," said women golf's greatest winner as she led the first round of the $14,000 Dallas Civitan Open.

"I then realized I was too much on edge and settled down."

She did, and played four-under-par after that bogey and came in with a three-under-par 68.

Miss Wright entered the second round today with a one-stroke lead over Carol Mann, who shot a 69.

Tied for third were Patty Berg and Kathy Whitworth, the year's leading money-winner with $5,764. Each had a 70.

17 Year-Old Girl Offers $1 For Yogi Berra

By WILL GRIMSLEY
Associated Press Sports Writer

NEW YORD AP--Since nobody seems to want Yogi Berra, a 17-year-old New York school girl offered to buy him today--for $1.

Maxine Siegel sent her order, check enclosed, to the New York Mets. Now she's waiting for her package.

"I don't know what in the world I'll do with him," Maxine said. "Maybe I'll take him to school and show him to all my friends."

"To Whom It May Concern:

"I read in the paper a few weeks ago that Yogi Berra was on waivers for one dollar. Since I have been a Yogi Berra fan for many years now and it doesn't seem like anyone really wants him I thought I would buy him. Enclosed you will find my check for the sum of $1. Sincerely, Maxine Siegel."

The Mets' management admitted that the letter put them in an embarrassing position.

"You see," a spokesman explained, "Yogi actually was put up for sale on the waiver list for $1, but it was just a formality.

"We hired Yogi as a coach and then decided to use him as a player. Before the May 11 cutdown, Yogi decided he wanted to stick strictly to coaching.

"To get him off the player roster we had to put him on waivers for $1. Of course, no club would grab him--it's an agreement--and he wouldn't report anyhow. We didn't expect anything like this."

"This is no joke," said Maxine, a freshman at City College of New York, majoring in biology.

"I always loved Yogi when he was a member of the Yankees. When he moved to the Mets, I became an ardent Met fan. My sister, Joyce, and I go to every night game.

"When I saw he was on waivers for a dollar, I told my father I thought it was terrible and I'd like to buy him. Father said why not. My mother wrote the check."

Maxine, a willowy brunette, said she came to love the 40-year-old catcher-coach when he was a star with the Yankees.

"He always seemed so good-natured," she added. "He was always talking to the other players. He'd make a cute toy."

Berra, advised of Maxine's bid just before he took the field at Milwaukee Thursday night, commented dourly:

"That's awfully nice, but she must have me mixed up with that television character, Yogi Bear."

Jones Out Of Indianapolis 500 With Mishap?

INDIANAPOLIS AP--Drivers and owners of cars not yet qualified for the 500-mile race at the Indianapolis Motor Speedway May 31 roll the racers out today for the final practice session before the last weekend of qualifications.

There was no more practice scheduled for Parnelli Jones of Torrance, Calif., winner of the 1963 race, who injured himself slightly and smashed his No. 98 Hurst Lotus-Ford Thursday.

X rays showed Jones had no fractures, but doctors planned to look him over again today.

Qualification was no concern for Jones and Owner J.S. Agajanian of Gardena, Calif. Jones qualified the car last Saturday at 158,625 miles an hour.

Agajanian said his crew would have the car ready to run by race day. He said the accident was caused by failure of some part of the rear suspension.

The countdown was approaching zero for the two score entrants which have not qualified for the race.

Only the 33 fastest cars in two weekends of time trials will start the race. Twenty-one cars made their qualification runs last weekend, and the rest have only Saturday and Sunday to try to make the line-up.

37 Pre-Season Games To Be Played In N.F.L.

Once Doubtful, Monegasques Are Now Princess Grace Fans

By ROSETTE HARGROVE
Newspaper Enterprise Assn.

MONACO (NEA) The story book Prince and his Princess are working it out in the best tradition of fairy tales.

Rainier and Grace, Their Serene Highnesses of this tiny principality, have children and are living happily ever after.

Once upon a time it looked as though it might not be thus.

When their prince married the American movie star nine years ago, the Monegasques looked with a certain amount of suspicion upon the woman he had chosen as his consort. They feared that Philadelphia-born Grace (nee Kelly) would Americanize the man who exercised Old World control over his 368-acre domain and would attempt to bring Hollywood to Monaco.

Grace had to learn the language and customs of her new subjects.

Rainier, Grace and Monaco all have adapted with remarkable success.

The Princess has proved herself a perfect wife and admirable mother and has assumed her state responsibilities as though to the manor born. Her beauty and elegance have brought new brilliance to the sometime rather shabby formal functions of the principality.

Two healthy children, Caroline, 8, and Albert, 7, have recently been joined by a second daughter, christened Stephanie Marie Elizabeth.

Ask a Monegasque housewife what she thinks of Princess Grace and she probably will reply—as one did—"We know now that the Princess has other ambitions than being a movie star or cover girl. She is a real helpmate to our Prince and brings up her children, as far as she can, just like any other well-to-do Monegasque family."

BOREDOM COMES EARLY to this tiny bit of royalty, Princess Stephanie Marie Elizabeth, who yawns in an unregal manner right in the face of her mother, Princess Grace of Monaco.

LIKE THE FAIRY TALE people, the Prince and his American-born Princess had many children and lived happily ever after. Shown with Rainier and her Serene Highness are Stephanie, Caroline and Albert.

The middle-aged Monegasque dames approve of Grace's lack of eccentricity or ostentation in dress. They like the way she still manages to appear glamorous, and are especially intrigued by the fact that she does not hesitate to wear the same ball gown several times in a season.

While the men generally are more fond of the brunette type of local beauty, they admire Grace's looks and approve her dislike of scandal in any form and her democratic way of shopping along the streets of Monaco afoot, and sans escort.

Grace has a real and very earnest interest in the Monaco Red Cross— of which she is president—in the problems of older people, the future of orphans and many other social service activities. She is not content just to make glamorous personal appearances in behalf of her charities, but works several hours a day personally answering letters and regularly visits orphanages and the old peoples' home.

The Monegasques were a little startled when a couple of years ago Her Serene Highness expressed the wish that Monaco's famed pigeon-shooting establishment replace live birds with clay pigeons, but her wish was their command, even though it meant a loss of revenue.

Rainier has also settled down to his responsibilities. To please his wife he has given up his racing automobiles, no longer speeds along the sinuous coast of the Riviera at 100 m.p.h.

No so long ago the Prince made an even greater sacrifice by selling his yacht, the "Albercaro".

A few years ago Rainier and Grace built themselves a model house at Mont Agel, about 30 miles away from Monaco on the French border. Planned on American lines, it has all the latest improvements and gadgets and here the princely couple spend weekends with the children whenever they can get away from affairs of state.

Julius Caesar To Be Presented For First Time

KANSAS CITY AP -- Julius Caesar, one of the many operas that spilled from Handel's fertile quill only to be overshadowed by his "Messiah" will be presented in America for the first time tonight by a professional company.

The opera's cast and production staff are internationally known and the performance has aroused the interest of the music world. Reviewers from Italy, England and many cities in this country are here for it.

Evelyn Lear, a soprano from Brooklyn who has been a principal singer with companies in Berlin, Vienna and London, will perform in her native country for the first time in eight years. She will be Cleopatra opposite Georgia Tozzi of the Metropolitan Opera who has the title role. Other principals are Mario Petri as Ptolemy, making his American debut; Cesare Valletti as Sextus, Oralia Dominguez as Cornelia, Raymond Mickalski as Achillus and Robert Banuelas as Curio.

The director and producer is Lawrence Kelly, managing director of the Dallas Opera, who became interested in resurrecting the work five years ago. He waited for an opportunity. Activation of the Performing Arts Foundation of Kansas City earlier this year provided it.

Nicola Rescigno, an American living in Italy, is the conductor. Jean Rosenthal, whose work has stamped a number of major Broadway musicals since Oklahoma, is the lighting director.

Since Rescigno and Kelly began working on the project, Rescingo has bought every edition of the score he could find.

The opera, one of 31 George Frederick Handel wrote between 1711 and 1737, first was performed in London in 1724. Handel revised it for every succeeding production - adding, substituting and subtracting areas and ensembles to fit a particular performer. If all the parts were performed today it would take about 5 1/2 hours.

The opera deals with episodes in Caesar's life after his defeat of Pompey. Pompey had fled to Egypt, but was murdered upon his arrival, leaving his wife, Cornelia and son, Sextus, distraught and eager for vengeance.

Ptolemy rules Egypt, though by rights his sister, Cleopatra, should be sharing the throne with him. She seeks Caesar's aid in securing her birthright and also the help of Sextus.

There are plots and counterplots, a couple of unsuccessful assassination attempts and a battle between Cleopatra and Ptolemy, which leads to Ptolemy's jailing.

The Performing Arts Foundation budgeted the production at about $150,000, all privately donated. The group was formed last February to offer the community artistic performances of highest quality - and to attract attention to the city.

The opera will be performed again Sunday and Tuesday. Its score and sets then will be leased to other professional companies.

Johnson Has No Intention Of Trying to Recast World

BY BRUCE BIOSSAT
Washington Correspondent
Newspaper Enterprise Assn.

WASHINGTON (NEA) President Johnson evidently is confident he acted wisely in throwing America's power into the Dominican crisis. Yet he is said to be somewhat restless over the problem.

Some high level aides cautioned the President that, once we become enmeshed in the Dominican Republic's affairs, it might be extremely difficult to extricate ourselves. The question of "next steps" struck these aides as a cloudy business.

According to reports, it is this aspect of the matter that has unsettled Johnson a little. A comment from one source:

"He doesn't like to be associated with anything that isn't going to turn out completely right."

THE NEW CRISIS APPEARS to have come along just as the President was beginning to take in better stride the buffetings from his other foreign dilemma—Viet Nam. Answering his critics, he and his helpers were capturing more attention for his side of the story.

Having been chided for too much secrecy over Viet Nam, he went the other way in the Dominican affair. In one official's view, this represents an "overresponsiveness to criticism" which in some circumstances could adversely affect the President's policy making.

However this might be, there does not seem much point in dwelling endlessly on Johnson's sensitivity to attack. As one old friend puts it:

"Let's face it. He's always been thin-skinned, and he's probably always going to be."

LATELY THE PRESIDENT has not been content simply to answer charges against the specifics of his foreign policy. He has been defending himself against the contention that he doesn't care enough about foreign affairs or give them sufficient time except when crisis compels it.

Here he gets at least a partial assist from a few administration men whose detachment has to be accepted as genuine.

The view they give is of a president who is willing enough to mix into the foreign field if there are pragmatic gains to be had—to defend the country's interests when that must be done, and advance them when it can be done.

AT THE SAME TIME, these semidetached viewers see no desire in Johnson to remake the world, to push out the frontiers of idealism, to go adventuring into the minds of many world leaders without specific intent. Says one source:

"He doesn't really expect much in this field. He doesn't think any amount of talking will change De Gaulle, or even President Ayub Khan of Pakistan. That's one of the overlooked reasons Ayub's visit was postponed. The President just didn't think he could make a sale."

Lyndon Johnson is not immune to foreign enthusiasms. He worked up a good deal of spirit over his "Mekong valley project" and general development proposals for Southeast Asia. But to one appraiser this is just a foreign transplant of his domestic enthusiasms. He adds: "The Mekong may simply be the Pedernales enlarged."

Missouri House Kills Bill To Hide Tickets

JEFFERSON CITY (AP) — The House expressed only minor interest today in a bill to keep arrest records confidential until the accused person is convicted. Then it killed the bill on a thunderous voice vote.

Rep. Raymond Howard, D-St. Louis, brought the bill up and explained it was "primarily aimed at newspaper people" to keep from publication any records of alleged crimes until conviction.

Rep. David Rolwing, D-Mississippi County, won adoption of an amendment to allow law enforcement agencies to share such confidential information.

And Rep. Don Kennedy, D-Vernon County, asked if the bill might prevent newspapers from covering trials. Howard said he didn't think it would do that.

Then the voice vote torpedoed the bill.

License and regulate sanitarians.

Raise the pay of third class county sheriffs by $2,400 a year and fourth class county sheriffs by $1,200.

The Senate passed a constitutional amendment proposal—the third one submitted to the voters by the current legislature.

It would allow cities building industrial plants with revenue bonds to sell the plants as well as lease them. Under an attorney general's opinion they can't be sold now.

Passed previously were amendment proposals to allow a governor to succeed himself and another to let St. Louis and St. Louis County solve their governmental problems with any method the voters might approve.

Passed and sent to the House were bills to abolish 36 special funds described as part of an archaic bookkeeping system and to let retired state employes participate in the employes' hospitalization plan.

As an indicator that the end of the session is in sight, Sen. William B. Waters, D-Liberty, announced that Monday will be the last day for the Senate to debate and amend its own bills.

The "battered child bill" is also on its way to the governor.

UP IN THE AIR

For the big dedication ceremony at the new airport in Los Angeles, a number of portable rest rooms were scattered around the place. Before the ceremony was due to begin, the man in charge noticed that one had been misplaced. A fellow with a fork - lift was called, and he picked one up and buzzed off with it. As he set it down in a new spot a quarter of a mile away, the door opened. Out stepped a fellow, pale and somewhat shaken but still jaunty. "Thanks for the ride," he said. — Art Ryon

John Hux Replaced As Chairman Of State Banking Board

JEFFERSON CITY (AP) — William M. Corrigan, of Florissant, was confirmed today by the Senate as a member and chairman of the state Banking Board.

He succeeds John D. Hux of Sikeston.

James Randall, St. Louis, was confirmed as a member of the Board of Curators for Lincoln University.

L. M. Crouch Jr., of Harrisonville, was confirmed for reappointment as a member of the state Commission on Higher Education.

Dr. Glenn T. Seaborg, Chairman, U.S. Atomic Energy Commission:

I like to compare basic research to mountain climbing in an unexplored range. Considerable preparation, training and strong motivation are required to get to the upper altitudes, even if no one stretch of the way is particularly difficult. But, once you're there, it is relatively easy to see vistas, or even to stumble across new riches.

The breakthroughs in scientific and technological achievements, like the discovery of fission and the development of the technology to utilize it, will come most surely in the field of basic research.

SOUTHEAST MISSOURI NEWS SIDELIGHTS, FEATURES AND OBSERVATIONS.

By MAX STURM
Missouri Weekly Columnist

DO YOU REMEMBER THE FIRST TIME you rode a railway passenger train?. . . Or maybe you never have, having grow up in the automobile, bus and airplane age in which you did your cross country traveling without use of the rails.

Anyway, for some 150 Hayti first and second grade pupils, and other school children up and down the Frisco mainline between St. Louis and Memphis, it was the first time for most of them this week as they were given short rides as end-of-school trips. It was also the first train ride for one of the Hayti teachers accompanying the children.

As the Memphis to St. Louis train pulled into the Hayti station the other morning, a bus from the South Pemiscot School at Steele was waiting to pick up a group of youngsters which boarded the train at Steele for the ride to Hayti. After these passengers disembarked, Hayti's trooped on for a ride to Portageville where school buses were waiting to return them to the Hayti school. And so it went. Frisco Agent F. M. Carlock said that he had received inquiries about such trips from at least five schools in the region.

As the 150 small fry paraded into the station with their teachers hovering over them and keeping them in line, about 15 minutes before train arrival time, I asked Agent Carlock if he intended to issue a ticket for each of them.

"I'm not beginning to stamp out 150 tickets for this bunch," he replied. "I'm going to issue one ticket for all of them." The total fare for the group came to around $34, and an observation was expressed that there was some passenger revenue Frisco hadn't planned on picking up that day.

Once the fare arrangements were made the youngsters immediately tired of staying in the waiting room, so a few started slipping out and then all trooped outside to watch for the train to come in. About five feet back from the inside rail there is a white strip along the station's brick boarding platform, behind which the people are to stand to stay out of the way of the trains. The children, of course, lined up on this strip -- no more and no less, craning their necks and looking south for the cannon ball to show.

There was a ripple of excitment when some kid yelled, "here it comes" but this turned out to be a freight train rolling by the station on its way to Kennett and other points west. There was a general groan of disappointment when it didn't slow up as the passenger train.

As has been reported in this newspaper, Frisco currently is trying to eliminate all of its remaining passenger trains - including the two running daily between St. Louis and Memphis (through Hayti and other points). Some years ago they were successful in abandoning the two night trains between the two cities. The local concensus is that they will also be successful in pulling off these two remaining trains, sooner or later. So, for the school children taking their train ride on a Frisco train, it also may be their last.

POOR MAN'S TV CRITIC: Well, we're in the season of re-runs, so everyone can now do a little channel switching from time to time and see many of the programs they missed back in the regular season. If you're not careful, you'll stare at the boob tube for 10 minutes before you remember that you've seen that one, and then its too late to switch over to another program and catch it at the start. It is obvious that the TV administrators expect you to turn the set off and go outside most of the summer. If it wasn't for the ball games, news and a few other special interest programs, mine would get a lot of rest in the summer.

Tried to watch the Johnny Carson show again the other evening, which is shown in small segments whenever the network doesn't have a commercial or future program to plug, or the station you are tuned in on doesn't have some free public service announcements to unload. This would be a rather amusing show if it wasn't for the constant interruptions. Anyway, this show happened to feature Barbara Nichols, the sex symbol, among other cerebrities. Now, those who saw it, what did you think? I think she was half stoned. She appeared determined to let her shoulder straps slip off, and off and off, permitting the upper portion of her dress to sag -- and it was low cut enough to begin with. At one point they put on a commercial in a hurry so they could get her off camera long enough to cover her up. She complained about it after the show was resumed. That was when I switched off the set and went to bed. Why those chicks are constantly appearing on this show in low-cuts beyond the networks permissible limits is beyond me. What are they trying to prove? Maybe they are trying to prove the same thing that the gals who wear the topless swim suits are trying.

LAST FRISCO TRAIN RIDE? -- Part of the 150 first and second grade pupils of the Hayti Elementary School boarding a Frisco passenger train at Hayti for a ride to Portageville as the schoolclosing trip. For many it was their first train ride, and it may be their last on a Frisco train since the railroad is trying to eliminate all passenger service on its system. -- Max Sturm Photo.

Comedy Continues Reign As Most Popular Show

NEW YORK AP -- When the second week of September rolls in, network television will resume regular programming with 58 established shows and 35 new ones.

Comedy will continue to reign as the most popular form of evening entertainment - 38 shows will be designed to keep us laughing.

Second most popular is a catch-all category of "dramatic anthology" which will contain 33 programs, ranging from "Laredo" one of 11 Westerns to sudsy "Peyton Place" to "Flipper," the adventures of a lovable dolphin.

There will be a magnificient total of eight prime-time hours a week devoted to running old feature movies - four programs spanning all three networks.

Variety and vaudeville programs will fill 12 programs and 11 hours of viewing time.

War will be a popular subject for both comedy and action shows, with at least 10 programs about men in uniform. Treatment will vary from the sober side shown in "Combat" and "Convoy" to a fun-war in "McHale's Navy" and Hogan's Heroes," a new series set in a prisoner-of-war camp.

"Hullabaloo" and "The King Family," hour-long programs this season, will return cut in half.

Dean Martin will be star of a new NBC variety hour and Steve Lawrence, of a new CBS music-dance - comedy 60 minutes.

"Hazel" and "My Three Sons" will be seen on CBS next season instead of, respectively, NBC and ABC, their old homes. Senior son Adam will leave "Bonanza"; "McHale's Navy" will be deployed to the European theatre, Gomer Pyle will get his stripe, and Samantha, of "Bewitched", will be more preoccupied with approaching motherhood than with spell-casting.

The currently thin ranks of cloak-and-dagger boys will be swelled by the addition of "The FBI," "Amos Burke, Secret Agent," "I Spy," and an uninhibited comedy series kidding all of them, "Get Smart."

Death will come to some 30 shows, among them "Wagon Train," "The Defenders," the Alfred Hitchcock Hour, "The Jack Paar Show," "International Showtime" and "The Doctors and the Nurses," all of which have been around for several seasons.

The first person to cross the Antarctic Circle was Capt. James Cook, one of the most famous seamen of his day. He boldly approached the antarctic pack with his sailing ship during his voyage of 1772-75, circumnavigating Antarctica without sighting land. The voyage helped to usher in an economic boom in the area. Soon sealers began to enter these waters. In 1790 a Connecticut ship captain made the first American approach to the antarctic and took the first fur sealskins to China.

Fission-Fission-Fussion, Fission Energy Release

By FRANK CAREY
AP Science Writer

WASHINGTON AP -- America's hydrogen weapons employ a four - stage fission-fission-fusion - fission process of energy release, Dr. Ralph Lapp said today.

The nuclear physicist provided this new wrinkle on how hydrogen weapons work after studying a long-overlooked government report which disclosed the key ingredient in the weapons is an ordinarily nonexplosive chemical called lithium deuteride.

Pound for pound, lithium deuteride is at least half as costly as the key alternative ingredients of conventional atomic weapons -- uranium 235 or plutonium.

The Atomic Energy Commission some time ago made public the fact that tritium --the heaviest of the hydrogen isotopes--is the substance which produces the explosive thermonuclear reaction of the H-bomb. It's done by a process known as fusion --joining--of atoms as distinguished from the fission -- splitting--process of the A-bomb.

The AEC also indicated that the tritium is produced by bombarding a form of lithium with atomic neutrons, or rays, in special necular reactors.

But the new Lapp slant is that most of the tritium is manufactured within the exploding bomb itself, with built-in lithium deuteride as the source.

The first official disclosure that the lithium compound is used inside hydrogen weapons was made by Dr. W. J. Frank of the AEC's weapons laboratory at Livermore, Calif.

He did so in a talk at a symposium on the "Plowshare" program--the venture aimed at using nuclear explosives for peaceful purposes such as canal digging--held at the University of California at Davis more than a year ago.

Lapp told a reporter about it today, with this interpretation of how the chemical is employed in weapons:

1. The explosion is triggered by the initial detonation of either U-235 or plutonium, forming a kind of core within the bomb. In the fission chain reaction involving either of these "conventional" explosives, atomic neutrons are released.

2. The lithium in the lithium deuteride undergoes fission, as a result of bombardment by neutrons. And this converts the lithium to tritium and helium.

3. Atoms of this "hot" tritium fuse with atoms of deuterium--another form of heavy hydrogen --contained in the deuteride component of the lithium deuteride.

4. More neutrons generated by this previous reaction cause the fissioning of uranium 238--ordinarily not fissionable except by very fast - moving neutrons--which constitutes the surrounding outer "jacket" of the bomb.

And all four steps release explosive energy of their own, the whole process taking place in a tiny fraction of a second.

"Thus," said Lapp, "you have a fission-fission-fusion-fission process--'4-F' as it were."

Dr. Frank in the original report referred to potential costs of nuclear explosives for "Plowshare" use. He set the price of U-235 or plutonium at about $5,000 a pound but said lithium deuteride costs about $2,500 a pound.

But Dr. Lapp said the latter probably could be produced for a great deal less than $2,500.

World Today

By JAMES MARLOW
AP News Analyst

WASHINGTON AP -- Do you ever get the feeling that at this moment you're standing in the lobby of history, just chewing the fat, between acts in one of the great dramas?

The world now is in the period between the Red Chinese conquest of their poverty-ridden land in 1949 and the time less than a decade away when they will have H-bombs and can deliver them.

The United States at present is taken up with its troubles in Viet Nam, trying to prevent a Communist victory in the belief it would lead eventually to Chinese domination of all Southeast Asia.

Recently the Chinese had two atomic explosions. And Dr. Ralph Lapp, a nuclear physicist who worked on the first American A-bomb but is not now with the government, guesses China will have the H-bomb in two or three years.

For China to get this far so fast has required fierce concentration of energy and resources and perhaps explains why it has avoided conflict over Formosa and direct involvement in Viet Nam.

Why be distracted if, within a few years and with nuclear power, the United States can be confronted with the grisly choice of atomic war or pulling out of Asia?

It is not stretching the imagination to think Red China will in time try to dominate all Southeast Asia, or all Asia. Just remember the attitude of the United States twoard Latin America, past and present.

Even in the early 19th century, when the American fleet could hardly defend the coast, a weak and new United States warned Europe to stay out of the Western Hemisphere, and that's still U. S. policy.

The Red Chinese would run contrary to the nature of nations and their own nature if, once they had the power, they did less than try to exclude the influence of the West from Asia where its colonialism has left a bitter legacy.

At one time China held Viet Nam for 1,000 years, lost it because of internal anarchy in China, and then picked away at it over the centuries. Later it controlled Viet Nam again.

For anyone with a knowledge of history and the national use of power it would be a dreamy condition to think the Chinese in Asia would act differently from the United States in the Western Hemisphere, other big powers in the past, and even Soviet Russia with its satellites now.

It was President Eisenhower who enunciated the falling domino theory: That once communism dominated Viet Nam, its neighbors would topple in time. President Johnson shares the theory, as he shows with his efforts in Viet Nam now.

The Japanese sought Asian domination and as a result drove the British and French out of their colonial holdings on the mainland and tried to eliminate the United States from the Western Pacific.

By their reckoning they could turn it into a Japanese lake. But the Red Chinese would have even stronger reason for attempting the same. They have more than just national ambitions.

Their ideology calls for the spread of communism everywhere until it dominates the world. If words mean anything they must be taken at their word, and they've made it clear worldwide communism is their ambition.

They have denounced the Russians for ever mentioning the possibility of "peaceful coexistence."

And if the time comes when a new and powerful China tries this, the United States, even though resisting, could hardly condemn it, in view of its own actions in the Western Hemisphere.

When some of the old and original leaders of Chinese communism, like Mao Tze-tung, pass out of the picture and the Chinese society becomes more affluent, the Communist missionary fervor may lose some steam, as it seems to have done in Russia.

But the national interests of Red China will not diminish under a new leadership or under less ideological zeal. They are basic and will remain undiminished, as they have in this country--keep outsiders out.

For these reasons the present U. S. activity in Viet Nam, and its sacrifices and anxieties, intense and important as they seem now, may turn out to be only a minor episode, or even an intermission, before the big act.

This happy combination of fashion and fabric is especially good news for the bride who plans to make her own dress . . . or for the mother who is following the long-established sentiment of sewing a wedding dress for her daughter.

As for fabrics, none are more bridal-looking — or easier to sew — than the pure cottons in the offing for spring and summer. From embroidered sheers to rich elegant laces, they adapt equally well to regal, train-sweeping gowns or short, very young-looking wedding frocks.

By selecting your own pattern and fabric, you'll have a wedding dress that's yours alone . . . created to be a very special fashion for that very special occasion.

Aviation and Space Education Workshop Set June 7 - 11

CAPE GIRARDEAU, Mo. -- A week-long "Aviation and Space Education" workshop will be held June 7-11 on the State College campus, to inform and instruct area teachers in all fields of space age activities.

A number of guest speakers will conduct the workshop, which will offer one semester hour of college credit, and which will include lectures, discussions, and demonstrations.

Topics will include: "Plans and Progress in Space Exploration," "Theory and Practice of Flight," "Commercial Airline Practices," and "The Government's Role in Aviation."

Tours, demonstration of facilities at the Cape Girardeau Municipal Airport, and optional flights for participants are planned. In addition, individual and group consultations will be held on the application of aviation and space information in the classroom.

Guest speakers will include Frank G. Mitchell, Cessna Aircraft Co.; John Sorenson, National Civil Air Patrol; James T. Pyle, Laguardia Field, New York City; Robert Summers, Ozark Airlines, and J. T. Seesing and John Godwin, Jr., Cape Central Airways, Inc.

Also speaking will be Rush Limbaugh, Jr., Cape Girardeau attorney and secretary of the Municipal Airport Board; Walter Buse, chief of FAA Flight Service, Cape Girardeau, and four professional flight service specialists with the FAA here: Ralph Branstetter, Ralph Schild, John Seay , and William Herrin.

Also planned on the program are speakers from the National Aeronautics and Space Administration, another aircraft manufacturer and the Cape Girardeau chapter of Ninty-Nines, women pilots' club.

Educational authorities at the workshop will include Warren Black, state supervisor of education for Southeast Missouri; Charles House, Cape Girardeau superintendent of schools; Mrs. Marceline Jenkins, Valley Park School District, and Bryce Marsh, assistant to the president, State College.

Tuition will be $12 and fees $5 . Those wishing housing accomodations will be charged $1.50 a night. Inquiries should be directed to Dr. Bryce D. March, State College, Cape Girardeau.

Some Savings Bonds Still Drawing Interest

COLUMBIA, MO.,--"Are my old Savings Bonds still drawing interest?" That's a common question being asked by bank customers these days, according to Clarence Klingner, MU extension agricultural economist.

The answer to the question, said Klingner, is "yes" if the holder's bonds are either Series E or H.

All E and H Bonds now held are still drawing interest as a result of certain extension privileges that have been given. All E Bonds have at least one extension--the older ones have gotten two.

As for H Bonds, those issued between June 1952 and January 1957 have a 10-year extension. Decision on the other H Bonds will come later, Klingner advised.

Persons holding any other series of Savings Bonds should look them over because they have not been extended. For example, said Klingner, all Series A, B, C, D, F, and G Bonds have passed their final maturity and no longer earn any interest.

In the case of J and K Bonds, the oldest of these began to mature in May 1964. However, the very last of them--those bought in April 1957 -- won't finally mature until April 1969.

ANN LANDERS Answers Your Problems

Dear Ann Landers: I've known Warren a long time but he never asked me out until two months ago. On our first date he suggested that I meet him inside the movie because he might be late. He said, "I hope you won't mind buying your own ticket."

A week later Warren invited me to a concert and asked me to pick up a pair of tickets because my office is next door to the ticket agency. He said "I'll reimburse you, of course." Somehow it slipped his mind.

He asked me to select a birthday gift for his mother. I spent $15. He keeps saying, "I must pay you for Mother's gift"--but I've yet to see the money. Twice I have been stuck for taxis because he didn't have anything smaller than a $20 bill. Last night he asked me to bring an extra pack of cigarettes because he hadn't had time to buy any.

I've never known a fellow who behaved this way but when I am with Warren the skies are blue and I can hear the birds sing. Any advice for me?--DEFICIT DONNA

Dear Donna: Have you listened to those birds carefully? I think they are saying "Cheap-cheap."

Put an end to the bumming routine. If Warren disappears you haven't lost much.

Dear Ann Landers: Why do people who write a daily column insist on putting in a picture of themselves--and a picture that was made 20 years ago at that? No columnist whose mug shot I've ever seen in the paper could be recognized from his picture.

The space your picture uses up could accommodate about 85 words. I would rather read what you say than look at your face. I suggest you drop the picture, Miss Landers. Thanks a lot. --PHOTOFINISH

Dear Photofinish: The mug shots which appear with columns are printed not because the writer thinks he is beautiful, but because a picture helps a reader find the column immediately.

When my column first began no picture was used. After several readers accused me of being a cigar-chomping male I asked my editors if they would run my picture. Now, aren't you sorry you said all those mean things?

Dear Ann Landers: If you can tell me how to free myself of my stepchildren without losing my husband you are a miracle worker.

We have been married 18 months. My husband's sons have borrowed money which I'm sure will never be repaid. They come over and drive his car out of the driveway without asking. They borrow his fishing equipment, walk off with his golf clubs, then complain because the golf balls are old.

My husband's daughter carried off my steam iron last week. When I asked her to return it she said, "I thought it was my mother's." I told her the iron was mine and she replied, "I dropped it and it's not worth fixing."

Saturday she brought her three children over and said they'd be back for them Sunday afternoon. (They had made plans to go to the mountains and the sitter fell through.)

My husband says I have to get along with them because they are his kids. How can I --and still keep my sanity?--8-BALL

Dear 8: You can't do anything about a father who is a shnook, but you don't have to be one, too.

Tell your stepdaughter to keep her pea-pickin' hands off your appliances. Refuse to allow her to dump her children on you. Let your husband know you will not allow his children to use you so shamelessly.

Parents are people--they can be right and they can be wrong. To help understand their viewpoint and to promote harmony at home, write for ANN LANDERS' booklet, "How To Live With Your Parents," enclosing with your request 20¢ in coin and a long self-addressed, stamped envelope.

Ann Landers will be glad to help you with your problems. Send them to her in care of this newspaper enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Senator Allott Attacks Gun Traffic Bill

By CARL LEUBSDORF

WASHINGTON AP -- Sen. Gordon Allott attacked today the administration-backed bill to curb gun traffic. He said Lee Harvey Oswald could just as easily have purchased his rifle from a sporting - goods store as from a mail-order house.

"That gun from a sporting-goods store would have been just as deadly as the mail-order weapon he used," said Allott, a Colorado Republican, in testimony prepared for the Senate Juvenile Delinquency subcommittee.

Two days ago, Atty. Gen. Nicholas Katzenbach, testifying in favor of the bill, told the subcommittee:

"As long as I live, I can never forget that it was a mail-order rifle--sent to a post-office box, that had been rented under an assumed name, by a man with an established record of defection and mental instability--that killed President Kennedy."

Allott and another Republican senator from the West--Arizona's Paul Fannin--argued that the administration bill would penalize ordinary, law-abiding citizens without correcting abuses in the use of firearms.

Allott said he objects to the notion that the word "guns" is "a four - letter, Anglo-Saxon word with dirty connotations."

He said, "Perhaps we of the West are more familiar with firearms and therefore fear them less, recognizing it is the abuse of the weapon that is the real problem. There are legitimate uses and legitimate users and I strongly feel we must not unduly hinder these legitimate uses in attempting to curb the abuses."

Fannin said in his prepared testimony: "The regulations embodied in S. 1592 the gun bill would not prevent the determined criminal from obtaining firearms; instead it would impose severe penalties on millions of honest, law-abiding citizens."

The subcommittee also hears today from Franklin L. Orth of Washington, executive director of the National Rifle Association. Katzenbach and Sen. Thomas J. Dodd, D-Conn., the subcommittee chairman and chief sponsor of the bill, have accused the NRA of attempting to discredit the bill with false propaganda.

The bill would forbid interstate sales of firearms except between licensed manufacturers, importers and dealers and would sharply curb imports of firearms.

Thursday, Sen. Robert F. Kennedy, D-N. Y., a brother of the slain president, testified in favor of the bill, saying "it would save hundreds of lives in this country and spare thousands of families all across this land the grief and heartbreak that may come from the loss of a husband, a son, a brother or a friend."

William Phelps Elected Moderator Of Presbyterian

COLUMBUS, Ohio AP-- William Phelps Thompson, a 46-year-old attorney from Wichita who speaks in the accents of a clergyman and manages money like a banker, was elected moderator of the United Presbyterian Church of the U.S.A. at its annual assembly.

After presiding over the week-long meeting, he will serve for a year as a chief spokesman, roving ambassador, and titular head of the 3.3 -million-member denomination.

Thompson is only the fourth layman in the past 25 years to be elected moderator. He won the attention of church leaders by his service on the budget and finance committee of the church's general council, the executive committee which conducts its business between assembly sessions.

He won the admiration of the 1964 general assembly at Oklahoma City when he appeared before it as chairman of the committee and guided the financial program for the coming year through the legislative process.

Thompson won election on the second ballot at the opening session of the assembly Thursday. He had 459 votes, to 350 for the Rev. Sherman Skinner of St. Louis and seven for the Rev. E. G. Montag of Beaver, Pa. On the first ballot the count was 387, 360 and 72.

Thompson was born at Beloit, Kan., and was admitted to the bar in Kansas in 1942 after winning degrees at McPherson College and the Chicago Law School.

He enlisted in the Army in 1942, becoming an officer in the judge advocates department. For a time he was assigned to the office of the chief of staff at the Pentagon, and he was an assistant prosecutor in the war crimes trials in Japan.

Thompson joined a Wichita law firm after the war and in 1946 became a member of the First Presbyterian Church. He had been a Presbyterian since 1930. He is a deacon and an elder at the church.

In 1964, he was among the three men nominated for a vacancy on the Kansas Supreme Court, but he did not get the appointment.

Thompson and his wife have three children-Judith, 15, William W., 13, and Margaret, 10.

In an article published recently, Thompson wrote:

"My religion has acquainted me with the Judeo-Christian ethic. This provides a reliable scale of values by which goals may be identified-not only for myself but also for the social and economic groups in which I am a participant . . . .

"When attainment of these goals is deferred, as well as in times of personal defeat and tragedy, my religion affords solace and comfort.

"But most significantly, my religion provides the motivating power necessary to guarantee sustained effort toward achievement of these goals--all of which may be summarized in the realization of the brotherhood of all men under the Fatherhood of God through the saving ministry of Jesus Christ, his son."

Thompson said if he were elected it would be an obvious expression that the church is looking more to its laymen for leadership.

"I would hope as I travel around the country that I might talk with the people and receive their suggestions about the ways the laity can take a more responsible, a more active role in the work of the church."

Robert Russell in To Catch An Angel:

The choice of how to make one's living is crucial, for the work a man does makes him what he will become. The blacksmith pounds the anvil, but the anvil also pounds the blacksmith. The clam's shell turns golden in the brown depths of the ocean, and in far more subtle ways is a man's mind colored by the course of his life. So when a man chooses his labor, he chooses his future self.

We're having a Chrysler sales success shindig! So who cares?

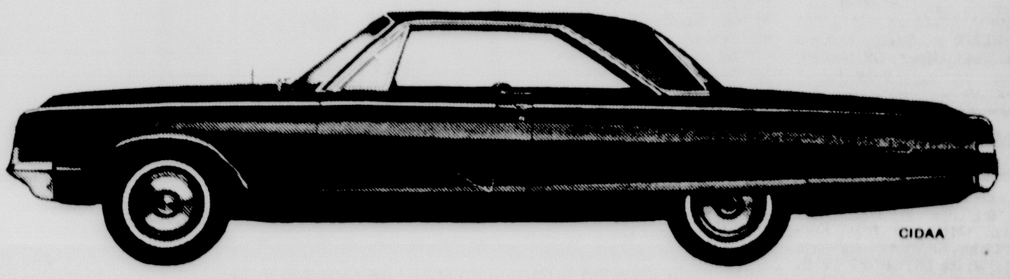
You will . . . when you check the price, looks and Chrysler's 5-year/50,000-mile warranty†.



Don't miss out! Join the thousands of new Chrysler owners who have already made this discovery: 7 Chrysler models (out of a total 17) are actually priced just a few dollars a month more than the most popular smaller cars, comparably equipped. And, remember this: Chrysler still carries the longest, strongest warranty in its class—5 years or 50,000 miles of engine and drive train protection. Move up to Chrysler. It's smart. And easy.

†CHRYSLER'S 5-YEAR/50,000-MILE WARRANTY WITH THIS COVERAGE: Chrysler Corporation warrants, for 5 years or 50,000 miles, whichever comes first, against defects in materials and workmanship and will replace or repair at a Chrysler Motors Corporation Authorized Dealer's place of business, the engine block, head and internal parts, intake manifold, water pump, transmission case and internal parts (excluding manual clutch), torque converter, drive shaft, universal joints, rear axle and differential, and rear wheel bearings of its 1965 automobiles, provided the owner has the engine oil changed every 3 months or 4,000 miles, whichever comes first, the oil filter replaced every second oil change and the carburetor air filter cleaned every 6 months and replaced every 2 years, and every 6 months furnishes to such a dealer evidence of performance of the required service, and requests the dealer to certify (1) receipt of such evidence and (2) the car's then current mileage.

Milk, Nature's Most Perfect Food, Watch It From Farm To Your Home

After the cows have been milked, the milk is cooled and stored in this machine until it is picked up by the dairy.

The milk is unloaded and cooled, at Reiss's Dairy, while tests are run on the milk in the laboratory.

Children at the Carousel Day School enjoy milk for lunch.

After processing, the milk is loaded on this truck and distributed to the homes.

By Don Savage
Standard Reporter

Some years ago, if you wanted to drink a glass of milk, about all you had to do was grab up a stool and a pail, walk out to the pasture, find "Ole Bossie" and milk her. Some of the old timers still say this is the best way to do it, and maybe they are right.

Milk products are still good, fresh from the farm. Perhaps now they do have a little different flavor, but that is due to the process the milk is put through for our own health. People still like homemade butter and, of course, one of grandma's most hated drudgeries was to work the churn. You could find her out back in the smokehouse in the afternoon performing her chore. It was well worth it in grandma's time.

We don't have to get up early in the morning and milk, or do the butter like grandma did. This is the question we would like to try to answer now. What happens to our milk right now in 1965?

Our cows go through a lot more now than their ancestors ever had to. Bossie still likes that green grass, but things have changed. Now she eats foods and grains enriched with special vitamins so that her milk will be more wholesome. She still spends all day in the field eating grass and soaking up sunshine.

Bossie is milked twice a day. Bossie is just like she's gone modern. She has her own modern conveniences just like you or I. Most of the milking is now done by electric milkers. All the time in our milk's process from the field to your table, we find that sanitation is very thoroughly stressed.

Our cows are washed, milked and fed all in the same process. A veterinarian checks Bossie to make sure she is in good health so disease can't be passed to you or me by her milk. A record is kept to show how much milk she is giving. If Bossie can't produce enough milk, they will find another cow that can. After she is milked, the warm milk is strained and cooled immediately. Bossie has finished her job now. The rest is up to us.

A truck comes to the farm, picks up the milk and takes it to the dairy to be processed. The milk is unloaded from the truck, inspected and weighed. Samples of the milk are taken to the laboratory where it is checked for purity and disease germs. The milk is chilled, then filtered. It then flows to another tank where it will be homogenized. Homogenization is a method of breaking up fat globules so they remain distributed throughout the milk. The milk is pasteurized. Pasteurization is a process used to destroy germs in milk. It is stored. The milk is then sealed by machines into cartons. It has it's final inspection, it is stored in a refrigerated room and sent to the store. You come along and buy it and take it home to use.

All this process from grass to the table takes less than three days. So the next time you are driving out in the country, tip your hat to Bossie, because she is the maker of nature's most perfect food.

Reiss's Dairy picks up the milk, on this truck and takes it to Sikeston where it will be processed for your protection.

Adequate Water Heater
A Must For Spring

Getting yourself into hot water isn't always such a bad deal, especially when you want just that--hot water. And this is the time of year when you need more than ever. With spring cleaning chores, additional laundry, more baths and showers, your heater will be required to supply considerably more hot water than needed in past months.

This is a critical time for heaters, reports the Plumbing-Heating - Cooling Information Bureau, because if tank capacity is inadequate for demand, the unit will not only fail to supply needs, it will also quickly wear out. "Over-used" heaters are subjected to rapid corrosion, a condition that results in irreparable damage.

In many cases, a heater has become insufficient because of an increase in family needs. A baby, for instance, requires about twice as much hot water daily as an adult. The addition of an automatic dishwasher or washing machine also places additional demands upon the unit.

The Bureau strongly recommends a spring check-up for your hot water heater. A reputable plumbing contractor will determine whether it is large enough for your needs, and whether it is operating properly.

If a new unit is advisable, buy one large enough to meet future expansion of hot water needs. Of the many models available, the "fast recovery" type is considered best because it more quickly restores the hot water supply to the storage tank when hot water is being used.

Today's modern hot water heaters are compact and may be purchased in round or table-top models. They can be installed almost anywhere --in closets, alcoves, bathrooms, kitchens and basements. For some very large homes, two heaters, separately located, give maximum hot water efficiency.

The Consumer's Beef

Consumers' preferences for more lean-type beef have led to new standards of quality for beef.

The U. S. Department of Agriculture recently announced that quality standards for beef grades will be revised, effective June 1.

Recognizing that consumers have become increasingly fat-conscious, the revised standards aim at reducing the amount of fat, or marbling, in beef. They leave the prime, choice, good and standard classification unchanged, but will change the marbling requirements for these grades.

Marbling requirements have been cut, with progressively smaller reductions for younger animals. This is a result of recent research on the relationship between maturity and the eating quality of beef.

The Livestock Division of USDA's Consumer and Marketing Service, which provides the meat grading service, explained that other factors being equal, as beef cattle mature their eating quality or palatability tends to lessen. At the same time, increasing amounts of marbling tend to improve eating quality, so official grading standards historically have called for increased amounts of marbling to offset maturity.

Resent research indicates that too great an increase in marbling has been required. This will be corrected by the new marbling requirements.

At the same time, USDA is encouraging production of the leaner beef which consumers want by instituting a separate and optional "cutability" standard. This new standard determines the amount of closely trimmed retail cuts of meat that a beef carcass can produce--an important factor in figuring costs and prices.

The quantity of waste fat which must be trimmed from a carcass to make retail cuts affects the value of the carcass. But past grade standards have not given consideration to the amount of this waste fat.

Identification of cutability differences can provide the basis on which competition may establish prices reflecting true market value. Price differentials would reward the producer of superior "meat-type" cattle, and should encourage the production of such animals.

As Secretary of Agriculture Orville L. Freeman pointed out, "The simplified application of quality grade standards will make the USDA grade mark an even more accurate and reliable buying guide for the consumer. Production of greater numbers of 'meat type' cattle can mean larger quantities of high quality beef at lower marketing costs as production, shipping and trimming of excess waste fat is reduced."

ROCKY MOUNTAIN NATIONAL PARK HAS 24 PEAKS OVER 11,000 FEET IN ELEVATION!

We have said that Rocky Mountain National Park is "all mountain!" And eighteen of them are 13,000 to 14,000 feet, forty-five are 12,000 to 13,000 feet and eighty - four are over 11,000 feet. Longs Peak, at 14,256 feet, is the park's loftiest. It is easy to understand why the crag-loving Bighorn sheep are symbolic of this mountainous area. Large herds of them are to be found here, especially on Specimen Mountain in the northwestern corner of the park. There are also elk, deer, mountain lions, bobcats, coyotes, beavers, black bear, squirrels, chipmunks and some 200 kinds of birds in this wildlife paradise. It's a fabulous flower garden, too, with hundreds of varieties including the charming and graceful blue columbine, Colorado's state flower.

Joel Estes, from whom the town of Estes Park got its name, came to the area in 1859. A few years later, the Earl of Dunraven acquired the Estes property and was, perhaps, the region's first booster. It was Enos A. Mills, however, who did the most to create interest in this many-peaked realm and Rocky Mountain became the tenth of our national parks in 1915. Every American should visit this majestic domain at least once in his lifetime!

Q—In Greek mythology, who were the Centaurs?

A—The Centaurs were the wild descendants of Ixion, who were half-horse, half-man and lived in the mountains of Thessaly.

Q—Which was the first state admitted to the Union west of the Mississippi River?

Blodgett News

At 8 p.m. Friday evening, the Blodgett Methodist Mens' Club met at the church, and, after a brief business meeting held a very interesting round-table discussion with Mr. Tony Heckemeyer, Scott County Representative in the Missouri Legislature.

The business session produced decisions to : (1) Have the June Cabinet Meeting on 4 June Friday at 8 p.m. BMMC. (2) Hold the regular membership meeting 11 June, Friday at 8 P.M. (3) To combine the July club meeting with the July Fellowship Dinner, and to show the official World's Fair film, "To The Fair". (4) Since this is a unique opportunity to see something regarding the fairly far away New York Fair, all persons in the region who are interested are invited to bring a dish of food, participate in the Fellowship Dinner, and remain to see the movie. (5) The meal will begin at 7 p.m. daylight saving time. (6) the date is July 9.

The club was very pleased to have Representative Heckemeyer present. And had a very interesting and enlightening discussion. Tony emphasized some salient facts, including: (1) The Representative goes to the Legislature to work for the people he represents. (2) It is important that the Scott Countians communicate to him their views regarding legislation. (3) Proper citizens should vote and vote intelligently, then follow with interest legislation in our state. (4) Bills that become law must be funded, to have any force. Some bills that are passed are never funded, and are therefore barren of results. (5) Mr. Heckemeyer undertakes to be a conservative. (6) He maintains that real estate taxes should go no higher (7) He stated that Church and State should remain separate: but that if and when good people remain silent and/or inactive regarding public matters, that bad people are likely to operate things their own way.

The sense of the club members was : (1) We desire our representatives to be possessed of intelligence and integrity. (2) We deem it both our right and our duty to inform them of our views. (4) We realize that law and legislation are so complex that a Representative must consider the views of his constituency and use his best judgment toward serving their interests, as governed by conditions.

The club very much appreciated this busy and dedicated young man using his time and energy in meeting with us; and would be glad to welcome him back at any time.

Host of the evening was W. A. Beggs, who offered excellent cookies and plenty of iced tea.

MISS FRANCE—Meet Josette Venton, 18, who was recently elected Mademoiselle France, 1965, at a ceremony in a Paris casino.

PRAYER
For Today From The Upper Room

FRIDAY, MAY 21, 1965
By love serve one another. (Galations 5:13)

PRAYER: We thank Thee, O Lord, for Thine immeasurable love to us. May that love fill our hearts day by day and overflow to all whom we meet. In Jesus' name we ask this. Amen.

IT'S UP TO YOU

By Howard E. Kershner, L.H.D.

Private vs. Government Companies in Business

A SMALL window on the relative efficiency of privately-owned companies as compared with the inefficiency of government-operated companies has just come to our attention.

Dr. Kershner

Privately-owned Pan American Airlines operates 116 planes with 24,851 employees, Government-owned British Overseas Airlines operates less than half that number of planes with only 20 per cent fewer employees —20,783.

Pan American flew 8,069,397,000 passenger miles, as compared with BOAC's 3,023,470,000 passenger miles. Pan American flew 324,711 revenue passenger miles per employee while BOAC flew 145,478 passenger miles per employee.

Privately-owned Trans-World Airlines flew 2½ times the number of revenue passenger miles per employee as government-owned Air France in 1963.

Privately-owned Continental, National, and Western airlines averaged 390,000 to 461,000 revenue passenger miles per employee while three government-owned lines, Scandinavian, Lufthansa, and Swissair averaged about 135,000 revenue passenger miles per employee.

On the whole, one person in the privately-owned airlines does the work of about three in the government-owned airlines.

Quality Foods Around The World

Cheese from Europe. . .cocoa products from Africa. . .fish products from the orient. . . foods from every country in the world plus the assurance of their wholesomeness and good quality are in the future of American consumers.

Through the Codex Alimentarius Commission, an offshoot of the World Health Organization and the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations, minimum standards of quality are being formulated for the foods of the whole world.

These standards -- entirely voluntary--are planned to be acceptable by as many countries as possible. They are, therefore, minimum. But the door is open for higher standards in the future.

Domestic standards, formed and administered by the U. S. Department of Agriculture's Consumer and Marketing Service, have brought shopping confidence to American consumers. The new Codex standards will in a sense take consumers far beyond our own borders.

The purpose of the Codex standards is to serve as trading guides--like many of our U. S. standards now do -- enabling buyers and sellers to communicate freely and clearly. A store owner in the Midwest, for example, could order French cheese meeting the Codex standard and be sure of the quality, etc., he wanted. Likewise, his customers could be assured of the product's quality.

The "grandaddy" in international food standards work is the committee on dairy products. Since 1958 it has produced a code of principles covering milk and milk products; standards for butter, anhydrous milk fat, evaporated milk, sweetened condensed milk, dry milks; and standard methods for sampling and lab testing. All these have been accepted by some 50 countries.

A general standard for cheese has been accepted by 17 countries. Currently the dairy group is working on standards for individual varieties of cheese.

Before any standards may be added to the official Codex Alimentarius, they must pass through an elaborate system of checks and clearances. Every member country must be given opportunity to comment on the proposed standard.

During this review process, for instance, the draft for an orange juice standard was contested by the U. S. because it limited the use of sweeteners to dried sucrose. The U. S.--supplier of 80 percent of the world's fruit juices--uses various nutritional sugars and felt this restriction would hamper international trade.

Other standards in the drafting process cover food hygiene: use of food additives; fats and oils; cocoa products; processed fruits and vegetables; fish and fishery products; and meat and meat products.

Formulating international standards is no small task, nor can the Commission predict when its work will be finished. But every new standard established means consumers can buy products from around the world with greater confidence.

Hayes was president when the first Chinese diplomatic mission to the United States arrived in Washington.

OUR ANCESTORS by Quincy

Today In U. S. History

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Today is Friday, May 21, the 141st day of 1965. There are 224 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On this date in 1832, the first National Democratic Convention was held in Baltimore. It nominated Andrew Jackson for president.

On this date

In 1881, the American Red Cross was founded in Washington by Clara Barton.

In 1891, more than 1½ million acres of North Dakota land were opened to settlement.

In 1901, James J. Corbett and Peter Jackson fought 61 rounds in a heavyweight boxing match. The referee stopped the bout and ruled it no contest.

In 1956, the first U.S. hydrogen bomb to be dropped from a plane was exploded over Bikini atoll in the Pacific.

Ten years ago —The U.S. Air Force started moving the first of its offshore radar islands, made of steel, to Georges Bank, 100 miles east of Cape Cod.

One year ago —Ambassador Adlai Stevenson told the U.N. Security Council that the United States could not stand idly by in the face of armed aggression in Southeast Asia.

Cape State Eases Housing Situation

CAPE GIRARDEAU, Mo.--With approximately 500 additional students expected to enroll here next year, bringing a total approaching the 5,000 mark, Southeast Missouri State College officials are moving to ease a tightening housing situation.

The College has completed arrangements with a local hotel, the Marquette, to house 84 male students on two floors of the building, at costs comparable to regular College dormitory space.

Earlier in the year, it was announced that additional students would be assigned to some of the College's residence hall rooms, rooms which until now had accomodated two students each. The action is planned to create space for an additional 400 students.

Dr. Mark F. Scully, President of the College, said that he was confident that all students would be able to find adequate housing either on or off campus, even if the fall enrollment should top advance estimates.

Hotel housing was undertaken on a trial basis, according to Dean of Students David A. Strand, who said that further arrangements might be made after an evaluation of the project. A possibility exists, he said, that more space may be used in the future.

Students living in the hotel will be in double-occupancy rooms with private baths, linens and weekly cleaning furnished by the hotel. Cost will be $8 per week per student.

Strand said that the hotel housing will operate in the same manner as the residence hall system, with total adherence to all rules and policies existing on the campus. Strand's office will assign a married couple to live in and supervise each of the student-occupied floors.

Two new 12-story residence halls, each housing 350 students, are planned for completion on the campus here by late 1966, and two more by 1968.

Mrs. Mary T. Myers Services At Dexter

DEXTER--Services were held Sunday at 2 p.m. in the Watkins and Sons Funeral Home for Mrs. Richard F. Myers, 51, who died at her home in Dexter last Friday. Services were in charge of the Rev. Arthur Fullbright, with burial in the Poplar Bluff City Cemetery.

Mary Taylor Myers, the daughter of Dr. A. H. and Julia Grigsby Marshall was born at Charleston, Missouri, October 23, 1913 and succumbed at her home in Dexter May 14.

Mrs. Myers spent her childhood and attended school at Charleston. In 1935 she moved to Perryville and lived there until 1946 when she moved to Poplar Bluff. In April, 1951, she moved to Dexter where she resided until passing. She became affiliated with the Charleston Methodist Church early in life, and after moving to Dexter she transferred her membership to the Dexter Methodist Church.

On August 31, 1932 she was married to Richard F. Myers, a Dexter businessman, and to this union one son was born. Surviving are her husband, Richard Myers of the home in Dexter, 1 son, Richard S. Myers of St. Louis, Mo., her parents Dr. and Mrs. A. H. eyes of blue and light brown hair, formerly Girl Friday to Phenix City's mayor, then wife and mother, was now a widow at 23. Her husband Royall G. Isaacs Jr., who had made captain without living to receive the notification, was killed on patrol in Viet Nam.

Resting a moment, she looked out the trailer's window at the clothesline, the clothespins all in place. Sadly she shook her head. He had loved to use those pins for target practice with an air rifle. They were always on the ground when she needed them. But now, of course, she wouldn't need them. Not here.

"I don't know too much about his life over there," she explained, almost apologetically. "He only wrote me the happy things. If he went out on patrol he would write later only that he had had a good operation.

"I received a letter after he was killed. He talked about moving camps and that he hoped he got to stay in that camp because they had spent a lot of work on it. He wrote how much he missed us and was looking forward to seeing us again."

Carefully she laid his Special Forces green beret in a suitcase.

"He had a pet dog that the Vietnamese people gave him—that was quite an honor —and a pet monkey. He learned to sing 'The Longest Day' in Vietnamese and the children were always clustering around him to sing it. He always did. He loved children.

"He sent the baby, Sherry Terrece, a Vietnamese record with nursery rhymes on the back. I'm keeping it for her."

Firmly she snapped shut the suitcase.

"Everything happened so fast. He couldn't stand tears. I'm trying so hard for him."

The Special Forces wives are a closely knit group. When a husband goes overseas, they keep the wife left behind busy with coffees and golf and bridge and hope she won't be too lonely. When a husband is killed they rally quickly to her side.

Of Shirley Isaacs, one older wife commented: "I used to worry about her because she often said she didn't know what she would do if anything happened to her husband. She's so young. Yet she's amazed us all with her strength. She's never once broken down that I know of."

More baffling to the wives was another recent widow, who was still lying on her bed staring at the ceiling, questioning why God had to take her husband, a week after the telegram came.

"We try to tell her her children need her — one is a tiny baby, you know — but she just lies there. We don't know what to do for her, except to take care of the children. Few Special Forces wives act like that," said the wife of a sergeant.

Some widows go back home, like Shirley Isaacs. She thinks she'll probably return to work for the mayor. He had told her at the funeral that her old job was waiting for her.

Some don't know what they will do. Ei Young would like to return to Japan, but she wants her children to have an American education. Possibly she will remain in the new brick house near Ft. Bragg that her husband lived in only one month before he went to Viet Nam just before Christmas.

if possible, and we are giving every chance to those in the rebel area to surrender or to come out. But we have to take the rebel stronghold very soon, and bring peace back to the country."

U. S. military authorities announced that a Marine was killed by rebel fire Wednesday night after he and another Marine accidentally drove their truck into insurgent territory.

The body of the dead Marine, who was not identified, was returned to U. S. authorities. The other man, Pfc. Leslie Mykle of Utica, N.Y., was released by the rebels.

The Marine's death brought to 19 the number of Americans killed since U.S. forces landed in the Dominican Republic more than three weeks ago.

The Johnson administration denied reports in news dispatches from Santo Domingo that U.S. troops have been actively helping the junta force crush the rebels.

Cyrus R. Vance, deputy defense secretary, told a news conference in Santo Domingo that Pe that President Johnson's orders that impartiality be observed by American troops have been made "crystal clear" to all U.S. military commands in the Dominican Republic.

Vance added that future U.S. moves in this country would be dictated "by events and circumstances" which are not now foreseeable."

In Washington, Asst. Secretary of Defense Arthur Sylvester said American forces from the outset have been under orders to "maintain an attitude of impartiality between the junta and rebel forces." He said they have complied except when firing in self defense against snipers.

Similar denials were issued by George E. Reedy, White House press secretary, and by Ellsworth Bunker, U. S. ambassador to the Organization of American States.

In the Johnson Administration's view:

-- Some U.S. Marines and paratroopers may regard the rebels as the foe because only rebels have shot at them so far.

-- U. S. intelligence still regards Communist activists trained in Cuba and Eastern Europe as a strong influence in the rebel movement.

-- Rather than aiding the junta, U.S. forces have actually held down forays by Imbert's forces by blocking off junta warplanes at San Isidro Air Base with trucks and jeeps.

President Johnson has said Communists infiltrated the rebel movement and asserted that the American nations will not allow another country in the hemisphere to fall to the Reds. But he has been at pains to declare that the United States did not intervene in order to promote one faction over the other.

Johnson's special mission to Santo Domingo headed by presidential adviser McGeorge Bundy was reported still searching hard for Dominican leaders who would be acceptable to both sides in forming a moderate civilian regime. Such a regime would be designed to hold office until a government could be chosen in free elections.

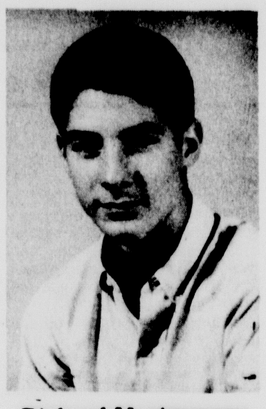
Eight Representatives From Sikeston To Attend Boys State



Richard Montgomery

Phil Barkett

Larry Barger

Kenneth Henry

Fred Lumsden

Tommy Pallus

Gary Williams

Mike Critchlow

Sikeston will sent eight representatives to the 1965 Missouri Boys State to be held on the Warrensburg College Campus during the week of June 12-19. Accompanying the local youths will be two from this area.

A Dexter high school bus will arrive at the Rustic Rock at 6 p.m. sharp, June 12 to pick up the local students, and transport them to Cape Girardeau, where they will join two chartered busloads of candidates for the nine hour ride to Warrensburg. The boys will leave Warrensburg at 10 a.m., June 19.

Richard Montgomery, son of Mr. and Mrs. Joel Montgomery, Hy. 61 north, sponsored by First Methodist Church Bible class;

Phil Barkett, son of Mr. and Mrs. Phil Barkett, 118 W. Wakefield, sponsored by Rotary Club;

Larry Barger, son of Mr. and Mrs. Gene Barger, 810 Wayne, sponsored by Coalesce Club;

Kenneth Henry, son of Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Henry, 520 Lake, sponsored by Junior Chamber of Commerce;

Fred Lumsden, son of Mr. and Mrs. Donald Lumsden, 731 E. Kathleen, sponsored by Lions club;

Tommy Pallus, son of Mr. and Mrs. Herman Pallus, 502 Lanning, sponsored by Kiwanis club;

Gary Williams, son of Mr. and Mrs. Marcus Williams, Rt. 1, Sikeston, sponsored by Women Civic Club and Lewis Furniture Co.;

Mike Critchlow, son of Dr. and Mrs. W. C. Critchlow, 721 Park, son Park, sponsored by Daily Standard;

Gordon Waller, son of Mr. and Mrs. Jack Waller, Malden, sponsored by Semo Voiture 460-40 and 8;

James Lee Hewitt, son of Mr. and Mrs. James C. Hewitt, Morehouse, sponsored by Morehouse Kiwanis club.

Boys State facilities for the week of training on the Warrensburg campus will find 840 candidates gathered, with the Posts of the American Legion responsible for making the Boys State a representative of worthy boys from all communities over the state. These boys are then sponsored by community organizations, who are chosen for their leadership, courage, honor, loyalty and service, and recommended by their school principal.

Boys State is purely an educational program, and not a picnic, an outing or a recreational camp. The boys have their own city, county and state government, and elect their own city, county and state officials. They learn the duties of all public officials, introduce and argue their own bills in their own legislature. It is an opportunity for every boy to learn for himself that his government is just what he makes it.

Interest High Toward Vance-Whitworth

Following publication in yesterday's Daily Standard of an expanding new manufacturer's proposed move to Sikeston, interest is running high among local townspeople.

Possibility of major portions of the activities of Vance-Whitworth, Incorporated, being relocated here is closer to reality today with many local businessmen offering assistance with the capitalization and site acquisitions necessary prior to the move.

Many telephone calls have been received by both the Standard and the Chamber of Commerce offices concerning the pending move.

J. W. Hartzog, C of C president, revealed that he had received a letter from the Board of Directors of the presently-based St. Louis firm which he said contained information that further clarified the company's plans.

This letter from the Board of Directors of Vance-Whitworth read:

Mr. J. W. Hartzog, President
Chamber of Commerce
Sikeston, Missouri

Dear Mr. Hartzog:

We at Vance-Whitworth are most pleased and gratified at the interest and support our Company has received in the Sikeston community through the five years of our existence, particularly in the last few months. Inasmuch as it now appears that this interest and support will enable our organization to acquire the capital financing and the plant facilities necessary at this stage in our growth, our Board of Directors has met to review the encouraging developments in this area and to consider our future here in Sikeston.

In this meeting of the Board, it was resolved that certain activities of the Company be brought to Sikeston in their entirety beginning July 1, 1965. These activities include our Manufacturing Plant and our Product Engineering, Quality Control, Fiscal Service, Planning, Scheduling and Administrative Services departments.

This early date for the relocation of these activities was selected because the Board felt the continuing high acceptance of the Company's data recording equipment and data processing services make it vital that decisions be made without delay to assure that production and developmental growth keep pace with sales efforts and marketing possibilities. The Board further authorized the officers of the Company to establish negotiations for plant sites for interim and long-term purposes.

We look forward to a long and mutually profitable association with this community, and we forward you this letter as a testimonial of our intention and desire to become a part of your community and take our place as an active corporate citizen.

Sincerely,
Vance-Whitworth, Incorporated
President Ray M. Whitworth
Chairman James M. Vance

Southeast Missouri Press Association Kicks Off

THE 73rd Southeast Missouri Press Association business session opened at 10:30 a.m. today with the Rev. William Stewart of Farmington as the speaker, giving a necrology report. Officers seated at the table were, Dennis Bacon, Senath, secretary; Barney Miller, Dexter, treasurer; and Art Wallhausen, Sr., the host publisher, Charleston. Other speakers were, Bill Bray, Missouri Press secretary; Frank Hecht, advertising manager, state association; S. S. Graf, state press vice-president, and Dean Earl English, school of journalism. Shown above are members of the press present for the opening meeting.

For the 73rd time, Southeast Missouri has gathered for a get-together of the district newspapermen and women. Today, the Charleston Enterprise-Courier, with its publishers, Mr. and Mrs. Art Wallhausen, junior and senior, are hosts with the meeting at the Holiday Inn.

The morning meeting consisted of a business session with reports from Secretary Dennis Bacon and Treasurer Barney Miller, followed by a necrology report by the Rev. William Stewart.

State Press officials, Bill Bray, S. S. Graf, and Dean Earl English, all of Columbia, wound up the business session.

The luncheon was held at 12:15 p.m. with the Charleston publishers as hosts, with the Rev. Robert Jaye, humorist, as the speaker. The afternoon session began at 1:30 with a discussion of the Commercial Code by Secretary of State James C. Kirkpatrick. Frank Hecht, Columbia, discussed the national advertising highlights.

At 2:45, Cliff Edom, professor of photography spoke on "Photography and Your Newspaper." The afternoon session wound up its business session with reports from the nominating committee and resolutions committee. A social hour was held at the Holiday Inn, beginning at 5 p.m.

The banquet will open at 6:15 p.m. in the main dining room, to hear an address by the editor of the Carlow (Ireland) Nationalist, Liam Bergin, who is on leave for six months study at the Southern Illinois University, Carbondale, Ill. The 1965-66 officers will be installed, followed by the presentation of special awards, with President Harry L. Denman, presiding. Special music will be provided.

Fulbright Named To Board Of Human Rights

JEFFERSON CITY (AP) — Gov. Warren E. Hearnes today reappointed Forrest P. Carson of Jefferson City as chairman of the state Commission on Human Rights and appointed four new members.

Carson, 55, is a Jefferson City attorney.

These other members were named:

Joseph L. Ames of St. Louis, secretary-treasurer of Local 410, American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employes AFL-CIO, to replace Norris H. Allen of St. Louis.

Mrs. Reba Schinault Mosby of St. Louis, an educator and consultant in human relations, to replace Howard Woods of St. Louis.

William P. Murphy of Columbia, a faculty member of the University of Missouri School of Law, to succeed Hugh Phillips of Camdenton.

The commission administers the Fair Employment Practices Act and other civil rights laws.

Son Knows Daddy In War Is Dead

By JOY MILLER
AP Women's Editor

FAYETTEVILLE, N.C. (AP) —The telegram lay on the round coffee table in the living room.

From his cardboard rocket ship, Stephen, 5, would glance occasionally at the strange yellow piece of paper, then at his mother on the sofa. She wasn't crying. She was just sitting there motionless, staring ahead.

With an air of decision he marched to the table and picked up the telegram. The words "The Secretary of the Army regrets to inform you that your husband—" meant nothing to him. But he knew.

Eyes wide with wonder, he turned to his mother. "My daddy is dead, isn't he?"

Ei Young, Japanese wife of Staff Sgt. Horace Young, newly dead in Viet Nam, stifled a cry and gathered her son to her. It was to be her only public expression of grief. Friends, chaplain or even her older son, Jesse, 8, when he came home from school, would see none.

Across town in a section of several hundred mobile homes called Trailertown, about a 10-minute ride from Ft. Bragg, a pretty young woman packed methodically.

She was going home to Phenix City, Ala., where her mother had been keeping her 8-month-old daughter since the funeral two weeks before.

No Summer Class At Malden Center

MALDEN — No classes will be held this summer at the Malden Residence Center, according to an announcement made today by Lyman Evans, director of admissions at Southeast Missouri State.

Interest was apparently lacking in the nine courses to be offered during the summer session, the number of those signed up generally falling far short of the minimum of 15 required for each class, Evans said.

Information was sent to the high schools in the Malden area regarding the summer classes, and notices were carried by news media of the Bootheel. Registration was held here on Friday, April 30, and Saturday, May 1.

Richland Schools Will Have Integration For New Term

ESSEX-- The Board of Education of Richland School District R-1 of Stoddard County has been notified that the district's plan of desegregation to meet requirements for compliance with Title VI of the Federal Civil Rights Act of 1964 has been tentatively approved for the 1965-66 school year.

This plan includes the following primary conditions:

1. All pupils of the district in grades 9-12 will attend Richland High School during the 1965-66 school year.
2. All pupils of the district in grades 7-8 will attend Richland Junior High School during the 1965-66 school year.
3. All pupils of the district in grades 1-6 will be given a choice of the school they will attend during the 1965-66 school year enrollment. Class loads and transportation routes being the only limiting factors in this choice.

Letters explaining this choice and blanks for a reply by parents or guardian have been sent to all parents by their children.

Replies must be returned to the school of their choice or to the office of the superintendent of the Richland Schools not later than June 3, 1965.

If no reply is received by June 3, the child will be assigned to the next higher grade in the same school he or she is attending this year, provided of course, that the child is promoted to the higher grade.

Kennett Endorses 'Sound Of Music'

KENNETT — The Kennett Chamber of Commerce, in executive session, has endorsed and commended the Wednesday Music Club of Kennett for its successful efforts in bringing "Sound of Music" to Kennett this coming Saturday.

The Kennett Wednesday Music Club is sponsoring the Sikeston Little Theatre Group's presentation of the long-run Broadway hit by Rodgers and Hammerstein as a part of their observance of National Music Week.

The Chamber of Commerce is commending the Kennett club because of the cultural benefits available to Kennett in having the opportunity of attending fine wholesome entertainment as will be seen and heard in "The Sound of Music."

The musical production will be presented at 8 p.m. Saturday at the Kennett High School auditorium with Mrs. Joann Ashbaugh Fox directing the music and Mrs. Hope Terrell as drama director.

Republicans Catering To Cities

KANSAS CITY AP -- The Republican party's only hope for effectiveness in Missouri is to win more votes in the metropolitan areas, state Rep. R. J. King Jr. of St. Louis said Thursday night.

Reapportionment of the Missouri House will leave Kansas City and St. Louis only two votes short of a majority, King told about 1,000 persons at a dinner for William O. Buffe, retiring Jackson County Republican chairman, and his successor, Richard L. Berkley.

Republicans will lose many seats in rural areas through reapportionment, King added.

The party, King said, can no longer afford the luxury of losing 99 per cent of the Negro vote, 95 per cent of the labor vote, and 98 per cent of the vote of minority groups.

"We must change our methods somehow," he said. "I don't know the answer. Somehow we must change the picture.

SIX EMERGENCIES

Six persons were treated and dismissed from the emergency room of the Missouri Delta Community Hospital yesterday.

Voting Rights Bill Put To A Vote

By JOHN CHADWICK

WASHINGTON AP -- Senate Democratic Leader Mike Mansfield sets the machinery in motion today for ending debate on the voting-rights bill and putting it to a vote.

Joined by at least 31 senators --there may be additional late signers--Mansfield will file a petition that seeks to limit each senator to an hour's speaking time on the bill and all its amendments.

The petition comes to a vote Tuesday. If two-thirds of the senators voting follow the leader, cloture will be applied and, Mansfield hopes, the bill can be brought to a vote by week's end.

Except for the petition filing in early afternoon, not much action was expected on the administration-backed measure today. It's a Friday and many members of Congress find it hard to resist a long weekend.

Last year the cloture rule was invoked successfully for the first time to cut through a filibuster against civil-rights legislation.

Republican Leader Everett M. Dirksen said Thursday he thinks enough senators will vote for cloture this time and that the debate limitation will open the way for passage of the bill next week.

Dirksen told newsmen he thinks at least 24 of the 32 Republican senators will vote to end debate. If they do and if all 100 senators vote, it will take 43 of the 68 Democrats to stifle Southern talk against the bill.

Southern senators have been fighting the legislation with words and with proposed amendments, contending it would deprive states of their constitutional right to fix voter qualifications.

They have refused to enter into any agreement to limit debate and bring the bill to a vote. However, much of the time the Senate has spent on the legislation since it came to the floor April 22 has been taken up by a dispute among its supporters over poll taxes.

The bill provides for the suspension of literacy and similar voter qualification tests in five

Cease-Fire Scheduled

By ROBERT BERRELLEZ

SANTO DOMINGO, Dominican Republic (AP) — A 24-hour cease-fire between junta and rebel forces was scheduled to start at noon today to permit removal of dead and wounded from Santo Domingo's battle-torn northern suburbs.

The Red Cross and the United Nations negotiated the agreement to suspend the five-day battle which has caused a death toll estimated at more than 100.

"I have every hope that this 24-hour cease-fire will be permanent," Dr. Luis F. Fernandez Martinez, president of the Dominican Red Cross, told a newsman.

But the junta president, Brig. Gen. Antonio Imbert Barrera, whose forces have cut deep into rebel positions in the northern part of the capital, vowed to carry his attack into the main insurgent stronghold in downtown Santo Domingo. He hinted this would happen next week.

Rebel spokesmen acknowledged that their northern forces were being encircled with their backs to the Ozama River.

Imbert told a newsman: "It is now too late for a permanent cease-fire such as the United Nations and the Organization of American States have been trying to arrange."

"We have renewed our military operations and they cannot be stopped," he declared.

Troop E Reports Two Highway Injuries

Two injuries in a single accident occurred in the entire Troop E area Thursday, when at 4 p.m. two cars met at an unmarked intersection on a county road eight miles south of Puxico. John Capps, 84, Dexter, and Maggie Hardin, 27, Dudley, were the drivers. Capps received a leg and hip injury, while Steven Hardin, 5, a passenger in the Hardin car, received a lacerated tongue, but not serious. There were three minor accidents over the entire area.

Three In City Court

In a short City Court session held by Judge E. R. Schrader three cases were brought before him, two of which were dismissed.

Edward Banski, Hot Springs, Ark., charged with public drunkenness, failed to appear in Court and had $25 bond forfeited.

Acy Hobbs, 213 Young, charged with disturbing the peace by use of loud and profane language had case dismissed.

THE MASONIC HALL dining room was filled at all times for the annual barbeque and fish fry held after 4:30 p.m. Thursday. The eating went on continuously except for Mr. and Mrs. Bill Depro, Matthews, who looked up with a satisfied smile at the time this picture was taken. Other customers go about their task of filling up at the tables.

1500 Attend Masonic Feast

More than 1,500 persons took advantage of the annual Masonic Lodge Square and Compas Club barbeque and fish fry Thursday afternoon and evening, according to Phil Waldman Jr., general chairman, and was an increase over any previous affair in several years. There were also 514 carryout lunches.

The serving started at 4:30 p.m. and lasted to 8:45, when all barbecue chicken and fish faded away. It was learned that at the very end 14 persons were turned away.

The excellent menu of chicken and fish furnished amounted to 1,125 halves of chicken, and 650 pounds of fish, with all of it consumed before closing time.

Side dishes included 1000 pounds each of potato salad, beans and slaw, with a desert of ice cream and pie, coffee and cold drinks for all present. An added assortment of fresh green onions was also available.

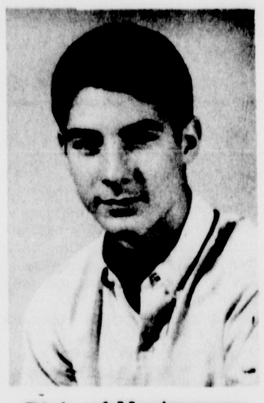
Eight Representatives From Sikeston To Attend Boys State



Richard Montgomery

Phil Barkett

Larry Barger

Kenneth Henry

Fred Lumsden

Tommy Pallus

Gary Williams

Mike Critchlow

Sikeston will sent eight representatives to the 1965 Missouri Boys State to be held on the Warrensburg College Campus during the week of June 12-19. Accompanying the local youths will be two from this area.

A Dexter high school bus will arrive at the Rustic Rock at 6 p.m. sharp, June 12 to pick up the local students, and transport them to Cape Girardeau, where they will join two chartered busloads of candidates for the nine hour ride to Warrensburg. The boys will leave Warrensburg at 10 a.m., June 19.

Richard Montgomery, son of Mr. and Mrs. Joel Montgomery, Hy. 61 north, sponsored by First Methodist Church Bible class;

Phil Barkett, son of Mr. and Mrs. Phil Barkett, 118 W. Wakefield, sponsored by Rotary Club;

Larry Barger, son of Mr. and Mrs. Gene Barger, 810 Wayne, sponsored by Coalesce Club;

Kenneth Henry, son of Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Henry, 520 Lake, sponsored by Junior Chamber of Commerce;

Fred Lumsden, son of Mr. and Mrs. Donald Lumsden, 731 E. Kathleen, sponsored by Lions club;

Tommy Pallus, son of Mr. and Mrs. Herman Pallus, 502 Lanning, sponsored by Kiwanis club;

Gary Williams, son of Mr. and Mrs. Marcus Williams, Rt. 1, Sikeston, sponsored by Women Civic Club and Lewis Furniture Co.;

Mike Critchlow, son of Dr. and Mrs. W. C. Critchlow, 721 Park, son Park, sponsored by Daily Standard;

Gordon Waller, son of Mr. and Mrs. Jack Waller, Malden, sponsored by Semo Voiture 460-40 and 8;

James Lee Hewitt, son of Mr. and Mrs. James C. Hewitt, Morehouse, sponsored by Morehouse Kiwanis club.

Boys State facilities for the week of training on the Warrensburg campus will find 840 candidates gathered, with the Posts of the American Legion responsible for making the Boys State a representative of worthy boys from all communities over the state. These boys are then sponsored by community organizations, who are chosen for their leadership, courage, honor, loyalty and service, and recommended by their school principal.

Boys State is purely an educational program, and not a picnic, an outing or a recreational camp. The boys have their own city, county and state government, and elect their own city, county and state officials. They learn the duties of all public officials, introduce and argue their own bills in their own legislature. It is an opportunity for every boy to learn for himself that his government is just what he makes it.

Interest High Toward Vance-Whitworth

Following publication in yesterday's Daily Standard of an expanding new manufacturer's proposed move to Sikeston, interest is running high among local townspeople.

Possibility of major portions of the activities of Vance-Whitworth, Incorporated, being relocated here is closer to reality today with many local businessmen offering assistance with the capitalization and site acquisitions necessary prior to the move.

Many telephone calls have been received by both the Standard and the Chamber of Commerce offices concerning the pending move.

J. W. Hartzog, C of C president, revealed that he had received a letter from the Board of Directors of the presently-based St. Louis firm which he said contained information that further clarified the company's plans.

This letter from the Board of Directors of Vance-Whitworth read:

Mr. J. W. Hartzog, President
Chamber of Commerce
Sikeston, Missouri

Dear Mr. Hartzog:

We at Vance-Whitworth are most pleased and gratified at the interest and support our Company has received in the Sikeston community through the five years of our existence, particularly in the last few months. Inasmuch as it now appears that this interest and support will enable our organization to acquire the capital financing and the plant facilities necessary at this stage in our growth, our Board of Directors has met to review the encouraging developments in this area and to consider our future here in Sikeston.

In this meeting of the Board, it was resolved that certain activities of the Company be brought to Sikeston in their entirety beginning July 1, 1965. These activities include our Manufacturing Plant and our Product Engineering, Quality Control, Fiscal Service, Planning, Scheduling and Administrative Services departments.

This early date for the relocation of these activities was selected because the Board felt the continuing high acceptance of the Company's data recording equipment and data processing services make it vital that decisions be made without delay to assure that production and developmental growth keep pace with sales efforts and marketing possibilities. The Board further authorized the officers of the Company to establish negotiations for plant sites for interim and long-term purposes.

We look forward to a long and mutually profitable association with this community, and we forward you this letter as a testimonial of our intention and desire to become a part of your community and take our place as an active corporate citizen.

Sincerely,
Vance-Whitworth, Incorporated
President Ray M. Whitworth
Chairman James M. Vance

Southeast Missouri Press Association Kicks Off

THE 73rd Southeast Missouri Press Association business session opened at 10:30 a.m. today with the Rev. William Stewart of Farmington as the speaker, giving a necrology report. Officers seated at the table were, Dennis Bacon, Senath, secretary; Barney Miller, Dexter, treasurer; and Art Wallhausen, Sr., the host publisher, Charleston. Other speakers were, Bill Bray, Missouri Press secretary; Frank Hecht, advertising manager, state association; S. S. Graf, state press vice-president, and Dean Earl English, school of journalism. Shown above are members of the press present for the opening meeting.

For the 73rd time, Southeast Missouri has gathered for a get-together of the district newspapermen and women. Today, the Charleston Enterprise-Courier, with its publishers, Mr. and Mrs. Art Wallhausen, junior and senior, are hosts with the meeting at the Holiday Inn.

The morning meeting consisted of a business session with reports from Secretary Dennis Bacon and Treasurer Barney Miller, followed by a necrology report by the Rev. William Stewart.

State Press officials, Bill Bray, S. S. Graf, and Dean Earl English, all of Columbia, wound up the business session.

The luncheon was held at 12:15 p.m. with the Charleston publishers as hosts, with the Rev. Robert Jaye, humorist, as the speaker. The afternoon session began at 1:30 with a discussion of the Commercial Code by Secretary of State James C. Kirkpatrick. Frank Hecht, Columbia, discussed the national advertising highlights.

At 2:45, Cliff Edom, professor of photography spoke on "Photography and Your Newspaper." The afternoon session wound up its business session with reports from the nominating committee and resolutions committee. A social hour was held at the Holiday Inn, beginning at 5 p.m.

The banquet will open at 6:15 p.m. in the main dining room, to hear an address by the editor of the Carlow (Ireland) Nationalist, Liam Bergin, who is on leave for six months study at the Southern Illinois University, Carbondale, Ill. The 1965-66 officers will be installed, followed by the presentation of special awards, with President Harry L. Denman, presiding. Special music will be provided.

Fulbright Named To Board Of Human Rights

JEFFERSON CITY (AP) — Gov. Warren E. Hearnes today reappointed Forrest P. Carson of Jefferson City as chairman of the state Commission on Human Rights and appointed four new members.

Carson, 55, is a Jefferson City attorney.

These other members were named:

Joseph L. Ames of St. Louis, secretary-treasurer of Local 410, American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employes AFL-CIO, to replace Norris H. Allen of St. Louis.

Mrs. Reba Schinault Mosby of St. Louis, an educator and consultant in human relations, to replace Howard Woods of St. Louis.

William P. Murphy of Columbia, a faculty member of the University of Missouri School of Law, to succeed Hugh Phillips of Camdenton.

Son Knows Daddy In War Is Dead

By JOY MILLER
AP Women's Editor

FAYETTEVILLE, N.C. (AP) —The telegram lay on the round coffee table in the living room.

From his cardboard rocket ship, Stephen, 5, would glance occasionally at the strange yellow piece of paper, then at his mother on the sofa. She wasn't crying. She was just sitting there motionless, staring ahead.

With an air of decision he marched to the table and picked up the telegram. The words "The Secretary of the Army regrets to inform you that your husband—" meant nothing to him. But he knew.

Eyes wide with wonder, he turned to his mother. "My daddy is dead, isn't he?"

Ei Young, Japanese wife of Staff Sgt. Horace Young, newly dead in Viet Nam, stifled a cry and gathered her son to her. It was to be her only public expression of grief. Friends, chaplain or even her older son, Jesse, 8, when he came home from school, would see none.

She was going home to Phenix City, Ala., where her mother had been keeping her 8-month-old daughter since the funeral two weeks before.

No Summer Class At Malden Center

MALDEN — No classes will be held this summer at the Malden Residence Center, according to an announcement made today by Lyman Evans, director of admissions at Southeast Missouri State.

Interest was apparently lacking in the nine courses to be offered during the summer session, the number of those signed up generally falling far short of the minimum of 15 required for each class, Evans said.

Information was sent to the high schools in the Malden area regarding the summer classes, and notices were carried by news media of the Bootheel. Registration was held here on Friday, April 30, and Saturday, May 1.

Richland Schools Will Have Integration For New Term

ESSEX-- The Board of Education of Richland School District R-1 of Stoddard County has been notified that the district's plan of desegregation to meet requirements for compliance with Title VI of the Federal Civil Rights Act of 1964 has been tentatively approved for the 1965-66 school year.

This plan includes the following primary conditions:

1. All pupils of the district in grades 9-12 will attend Richland High School during the 1965-66 school year.
2. All pupils of the district in grades 7-8 will attend Richland Junior High School during the 1965-66 school year.
3. All pupils of the district in grades 1-6 will be given a choice of the school they will attend during the 1965-66 school year enrollment. Class loads and transportation routes being the only limiting factors in this choice.

Letters explaining this choice and blanks for a reply by parents or guardian have been sent to all parents by their children.

Replies must be returned to the school of their choice or to the office of the superintendent of the Richland Schools not later than June 3, 1965.

If no reply is received by June 3, the child will be assigned to the next higher grade in the same school he or she is attending this year, provided of course, that the child is promoted to the higher grade.

Kennett Endorses 'Sound Of Music'

KENNETT — The Kennett Chamber of Commerce, in executive session, has endorsed and commended the Wednesday Music Club of Kennett for its successful efforts in bringing "Sound of Music" to Kennett this coming Saturday.

The Kennett Wednesday Music Club is sponsoring the Sikeston Little Theatre Group's presentation of the long-run Broadway hit by Rodgers and Hammerstein as a part of their observance of National Music Week.

The Chamber of Commerce is commending the Kennett club because of the cultural benefits available to Kennett in having the opportunity of attending fine wholesome entertainment as will be seen and heard in "The Sound of Music."

The musical production will be presented at 8 p.m. Saturday at the Kennett High School auditorium with Mrs. Joann Ashbaugh Fox directing the music and Mrs. Hope Terrell as drama director.

POOR CHARLIE SAYS!

Friday, May 21 War of Roses comes to an end. (Rose Krell of Brooklyn, N. Y. is winner.)

To the readers of our columnist Victor Riesel, the dramatic labor message sent up the Hill by President Johnson came as no surprise. Mr. Riesel was ahead on this story with a series of exclusives which began as early as Mar. 12 -- fully nine weeks ago.

On that day Mr. Riesel alone reported the details of a closed-door session in Mr. Johnson's White House office attended by the President, some of his key aides, and several labor leaders.

It was at this session that the President outlined what he would and would not put into his labor message.

These were details eagerly sought by labor leaders, businessmen and the public -- since the message would affect tens of millions of people and tens of thousands of businesses.

In his March 12 column, Mr. Riesel revealed that the President had promised he would include the demand for repeal of Taft-Hartley clause "14 B"; that he would seek extension of coverage of the minimum wage law to additional millions; that he would push for double time for overtime, but he would not ask for a shorter work week.

Riesel said then that the President would urge a study of the latter. President Johnson's message completely corroborated Mr. Riesel's exclusive report.

USRLA -- RED PLAN FOR LATIN AMERICA

Defectors from the Soviet side to our side in the world conflict should be an important force. For many years, with the Naval Intelligence and with State and U. S. Senate committees, I had the responsibility of inducing wavering communists and people in the twilight of their communist careers to come over to the side of the United States. I know what a magnificent contribution defectors have made to our understanding of the communist conspiracy. They made valiant witnesses, and the whole free world was better for their testimony.

In recent years, however, the people running our executive policy have not shown the high resolve necessary to induce defections. Many of us were shocked in 1958 when we learned that a Danish international civil servant, Povl Bang-Jensen, had been approached at the U.N. by a cluster of potential Soviet defectors who asked that he aid them to asylum in the United States. The approach had been made at the time of the crushing of the Hungarian uprising by Soviet tanks in 1956.

These defectors told Bang-Jensen that the 38th floor of the U.N. (the top administrative offices) was actually under Soviet control and that the Soviet Secret Police had penetrated our Foreign Intelligence. This information was dispatched to the then head of our CIA, who, instead of zealously moving to acquire the vital secrets available from this important source, let Bang-Jensen and the defectors cool their heels for seven anguished months, after which they were no longer available.

I read in the Congressional Record of September 24 another startling defector story. It comes through an interview between the competent foreign editor of the Washington Star, Constantine Brown, and a former high official of the Communist Czechoslovak government. The defector told Brown much about communist future plans which we should know.

The defector left communism because he could no longer stand the intrigue involved. However, since his defection he had come to realize he had joined "the losing side" because the leaders of the West, mostly in the United States and Britain, refused to believe that Khrushchev is planning to conquer the world.

He told of a communist plan, blueprinted and sealed during Castro's 37-day visit this summer to the U. S. S. R. that called for the success of what is called in the Kremlin -- the USRLA -- the United Socialist Republics of Latin America. By 1968 this Soviet unit is to include Cuba, Venezuela, Colombia, Brazil, British Guiana, Mexico, Chile and Hispaniola. (This was before the overthrow of Juan Bosch.)

Castro, according to the defector, is to be the leading force, but let Constantine tell the rest:

"According to my informant, Khrushchev has instructed Castro to lay the groundwork without haste. It is essential, he is reported to have said, that the chances of re-election of the present Washington administration, sympathetic to socialism, and dedicated to a relaxation of tensions, should not be endangered. It is also important that the British Labor party, headed by Harold Wilson -- described by Khrushchev as a man of great intelligence and insight toward world trends -- should replace the wobbly, uncertain and tired Conservatives.

"Hence, there must be no hasty or rash moves by Fidel and his associates through Latin America. Castro must accept with good grace any indications for reconciliation with the United States -- even at the price of some concessions regarding the confiscation of American properties.

The testimony of this defector, properly checked, should be brought to the attention of the world, not hidden in the Congressional Record. Our official policy is working to bring about a merger with this country and the nations of the world under the United Nations. Under this, we would be a minority; but if the Latin American bloc is to be put into the Soviet side of the aisle, we will be almost a solitary voice in the consensus. By Robert Morris

The desire to save words, and therefore money, in telegrams and cables has created a form of pidgin English among foreign correspondents and their editors, the Catholic Digest has learned.

"Canst," for example, is cheaper to say than "Can You?" and the prefix "un" serves for any kind of negative.

One editor wanted to tell his correspondent that, according to news agencies, riots had broken out near Timbuktu and air passage should be booked at once. "Agencywise riots outbroken Timbuktuwards canst proceed airwise query." The reluctant correspondent cabled back: "Viewing story unfolded Tuesday unthink coverage newsworthy." The reply, however, was, "Proceed soonest."

Another lazy correspondent received the cable: "Why unnews query." He cabled back: "Unnews good news." His office replied: "Unnews unjob."

No news wasn't good news for one isolated reporter. So he cabled one word: "Boo." The instalt reply: "Boo or unboo you onstaying."

One newspaper asked its reporter for the age of the Governor of his district. "How old Brown," it read. Peeved because he knew the data was available in Colonial Office files, the newsman cabled back: "Old Brown fine how are you."

HOW LONG IS A YARDSTICK?

A top spokesman for the National Rural Electric Cooperative Association urges that the federal government more than triple its power production by 1980 as part of a plan to provide the American consumer with an effective yardstick to measure and control power rates.

A fundamental question immediately arises. If such a plan were approved, how long would be the yardstick?

As of now, the existing alleged "yardsticks" are short indeed. The Tennessee Valley Authority, for instance, pays no federal income taxes, relatively small sums in lieu of local taxes and has various other special privileges which are paid, directly or indirectly, by the taxpayers at large.

The REA co-ops pay no federal income taxes and borrow money from the Treasury at about half the rate the Treasury must pay on its own long-term borrowings. Again, we have direct and indirect taxpayer subsidies.

So the story goes, all the way down to the municipal systems. In every case, the publicly-owned operations have important financial advantages which are denied the heavily-taxed, publicly-regulated, investor-owned utilities.

The "yardstick" concept is meaningless and worse --unless all power supplies, public and private, operate on precisely the same basis.

You may not be able to legislate morality, as the well-worn saying advises, but it should be possible to eliminate some of the trouble people sometimes find themselves in because they acted morally. That appears to be the consensus of a group of 11 lawyers, philosophers, sociologists and others who met in a Good Samaritan Symposium at the University of Chicago.

In recent years, a number of cases in which human beings in mortal danger were ignored by onlookers have aroused the public conscience. At the other extreme, acts of Good Samaritanship have resulted in physical injury, financial loss or law suits for those who performed them.

While some countries -- France, Germany and the Soviet Union, for example--have "bad Samaritan" laws making it a crime to fail to aid persons in distress when this is possible, the symposium questioned their workability.

No law cannot ordain courage, heroism or self-sacrifice. The law could, however, provide compensation for Good Samaritans or exempt them from legal action by those they attempt to help. (In some states, doctors rendering emergency treatment are protected.)

As law professor Charles O. Gregory of the University of Virginia put it:

"I suppose there is much to be said for the old Anglo-American attitude of minding your own business--except as that the world changes, the other people's business in more and more ways becomes yours."

PROPERTY TAX STILL MAINSTAY

Although constantly on the lookout for new revenue sources, local governments still depend on the property tax as a principal revenue source, says Tax Foundation.

Nineteen years ago, total state and local tax collections amounted to $10 billion; $5 billion represented collections from the property tax, according to the Foundation's new, 13th edition of Facts and Figures on Government Finance, 1964-65.

In fiscal 1963, total tax collections were $44 billion, more than four times the 1946 figure. Of this amount, $20 billion came from property taxes.

It is estimated that total state and local government collections in fiscal 1964 will be between $47 billion and $48 billion, up 470 percent since 1946!

In the years 1946-1963, property tax collections increased just over 300 percent; collections from sales and gross receipts taxes increased nearly 400 percent, said the Foundation. Figures for 1946 and for subsequent selected years:

TAX RECEIPTS EQUAL $2,600 PER FAMILY

The average American family's share of the total taxes collected in fiscal 1964 by all levels of government approximated $2,600, says Tax Foundation, Inc. In fiscal 1963, the per family share was $2,493.

Total government (Federal, state and local) tax receipts in fiscal 1964 are estimated by the Foundation at $158.4 billion, up almost $10 billion over fiscal 1963.

PASSED $100 BILLION In 1965

As total government tax receipts move upward from the $150 billion point, the Foundation, in its new, 13th edition of Facts and Figures on Government Finance, 1964-65, points out that it was in fiscal 1956 that total tax receipts first passed $100 billion.

One of the new book's 190 tables shows that state-local tax receipts amounted to about $32 billion in fiscal 1958; in 1964 they are estimated at $51 billion.

Tax receipts by selected years, by level of government, and on a per family basis, follow:

F.Y.	Tot. (in billions)	Fed.	State & Local	Total Per Family (in 000's)
1963	149	102	47	2.5

CAMP GIA VUC, South Viet Nam AP -- Some U. S. soldiers regard Viet Nam as a muddy wasteland which they hate the whole time they are here.

Others fall in love with the land and its people and try to perform a real service during their tour of duty.

This rugged, 27-year-old officer has the job of handling civil affairs for a U. S. Army Special Forces unit stationed in a key position astride the famed Ho Chi Minh trail.

He has been a one-man goodwill mission among 3,000 inhabitants of 12 straggling hillside bamboo hut hamlets. America probably doesn't have a better liked envoy than this young "Mayor of Poverty Flats."

In several weeks of whirlwind activities Lt. Damewood has done these things:

Set up two dispensaries and taught villagers the rudiments of sanitation.

Organized and provided books for a 40 people school for children who had never been in a class room.

Arranged a program under which the villagers can exchange their rude crossbows and other handicraft items for tools, cloth, blankets and hardware.

"They are also planting family gardens for the vegetables they need to vary their diet," Damewood said. "And we are also planting some 500 fruit and nut trees, and starting other projects to provide them with fish ponds and help raise the quality of their pigs and rabbits."

The lieutenant gives out 4,800 bars of soap each month. He pointed at a flapping laundry line stretched between two huts.

"You never used to see that here before," he said. "Many of the children now are brushing their teeth regularly. We are trying to get them to realize that most of their diseases are caused by dirt and lack of hygiene.

"Out theme is that self-sufficiency is the first step toward self-government. And these people show a real willingness to improve their lot.

"Our goal is to get these betterment programs going so well that when we pull out, the villager will be able to make a go of things themselves without further assistance."

Damewood's pride is the "New Life Hamlet," a community of 175 huts built from scratch to house 750 Montagnard tribesmen driven from their homes farther north by Viet Cong guerrillas.

"We provided the materials, but they put up the houses themselves," he said. "They have a wonderful spirit. You can't help liking and admiring them."

There are an estimated 750,000 of the mountain tribesmen in South Viet Nam.

"I think the future of the country may depend on whether they stay with the government or swing to the Viet Cong," he said. "These people here are staying with the government and risking their lives to do it."

Washington-Merry-Go-Round

By Drew Pearson

WASHINGTON — There is only one agency of government which has paid any attention to Gen. Eisenhower's farewell message to the American people warning of the alliance between big defense contractors, retired generals and admirals, and the Defense Department. That agency is the General Accounting Office.

During the last fiscal year alone, the General Accounting Office submitted 144 reports on improper military spending. They checked into everything from subsidizing golf spectators to squandering money on dress shoes and pants with pocket flaps.

This is the inside reason why defense contractors have pulled wires with Rep. Chet Holifield, the onetime liberal Democrat from California, and induced him to investigate the General Accounting Office. Irony is that Holifield's subcommittee is charged with policing military mismanagement and waste. It is supposed to work with GAO, not against it.

GAO's unsung accountants pursue the disappearing tax dollar through the maze of defense contracts as no congressional committee ever does. They search for hidden profits, watch for misspent money, check all the fine print in defense contracts. Scarcely a defense industry has escaped their eagle eye.

1. Fort Gordon was revealed to have been providing cutrate accommodations for military brass who come to Augusta, Ga., to watch the annual Masters golf tournament. Visiting officers are charged as low as 40 cents for a room in the Bachelor Officers' quarters, up to $2.50 for family accommodations. (Commercial rates in Augusta during Masters week run about $20 a day.) The Army also has been furnishing free transportation to the golf course, cocktail parties after a hard day on the links, and daily towel service.

2. The Navy was found to be spending an unnecessary $158,000 a year, simply because the admirals had refused to give up their brown dress shoes and wear only black shoes like the general.

3. The flap over pants flaps was caused by Army-Marine failure to settle on one style of pants. The GAO complained that it cost the taxpayers an extra $68,000 to supply trousers both with and without flaps on the hip pocket.

—THE WEAPONS MAKERS—

The GAO has been roughest, however, on the weapons makers. They have been taking the biggest bite out of the taxpayers, and one GAO report last year charged that the Navy had spent a staggering $445,400,000 with the Glenn L. Martin Company over a 10-year period, yet had not received a single serviceable P&M seaplane for its money.

The GAO also accused Bethlehem Steel of collecting $5,000,000 more than its cost figures justified for the construction of the nuclear frigate NS Bainbridge.

In another report, GAO jumped on the Aluminum Company of America for charging the Air Force and exorbitant 51 per cent mark-up for aircraft forgings. Boeing was also accused of pocketing $2,203,450 too much on its Bomarc missile contract.

—TRIBUTE TO MME. PERKINGS—

The last survivor of the Triangle fire died last week. She was 83-year-old Frances "Fanny" Perkins, FDR's Secretary of Labor and one of four national figures who, like Phoenix, rose from the ashes of the Triangle fire.

That fire, which in 1911 roasted to death 145 people at their work in New York City's Triangle Shirtwaist factory, shocked the world. It also awakened the United States to horrible working conditions in sweatshops, and started a crusade for reform.

The leaders of that reform were Al Smith, who became governor of New York and ran for president in 1928; Franklin Delano Roosevelt, who also became New York governor, and was elected President in 1932; Robert Wagner, born in Germany and father of the present mayor of New York, and who as Senator from New York State sponsored the Wagner Act, the NLRB, and the most important labor legislation in history; and Frances Perkins, who became Secretary of Labor. She served longer than any other Secretary of Labor in history, and was one of the most criticized.

I was among her critics. She took the criticism philosophically, and, as I look back on her career, I feel rather mean about my criticism.

For, in the whole, Frances Perkins was a dedicated, devoted public servant. Before she died, I said so. And I salute her memory now as one of the four greats who from the ashes of tragedy built a better America.

Inside Labor

By Victor Riesel

President Stakes Global Prestige On Labor Message

Washington, D. C.:--To keep his promise to his labor friends and allies, President Johnson has waded into the first prestige-making fight with Congress he's not certain he can win.

His move to repeal the laws banning union shops came at a risky moment in global history. Any defeat in the Congress on any major issue will hurt him abroad.

But he could wait no longer and still keep his pledge ot the union chiefs in this session of Congress. His action is a mark of his personal -- and political--respect for them and the high place they have in his administration.

He moved cautiously. He avoided the crises. He shied away from sending his labor message up during the dock and steel industries' uproars. He outwaited the scandal over the wrong count in the International Union of Electrical Workers' presidential election.

He consulted with George Meany and the labor leaders in a series of closed-door conferences and private telephone calls.

In a long intimate talk with Meany during the height of the Dominican crisis, Mr. Johnson outlined his strategy. The President wanted to avoid anything which would divert him from international affairs.

But the time had come for the move on the labor front. If the President hesitated "the season would be over," as they say inside labor. A secret poll of Congress showed that the Senate was with them--and they had a 10 vote majority in the House.

Introduction of the bills now would bring action on the Hill about July 1. Any delay would force debate to run into the climax of the steel negotiations at the end of which there still may be a national strike.

So, Mr. Johnson unloosed his proposals for slashing excise taxes. The move should keep business happy. A cut in taxes would stimulate sales on everything from cars to color TV receivers.

Then at ten o'clock the next day the press was briefed on the labor message. At noontime the doorkeeper in the House called out, Mr. Speaker, I have a message from the President. Mr. Johnson, as usual, had tried to give something to both sides.

But many businessmen are not happy. They are saying that the rest of the President's message will cost them billions more in payroll taxes and increases. And they are emotional about repeal of the "right-to-work" law.

They've been preparing for this fight for a long time. It will rage. They may beat down the razor-edged labor margin in the House.

Labor's lobbyists already are flocking in. But even as they converge on the Congress, the union chiefs are seeking new vistas. What will they urge next?

A hint of this is in an unreported telegram dispatched to the President recently by Hunter Wharton, the mild ice-cream-soda-drinking president of the powerful Operating Engineers Union. The wire urged the President to appoint a special task force immediately to begin planning a vast Mississippi River Flood Control Authority.

Wharton told the President that his union colleagues felt that a master plan should be drawn up speedily for a network of dams and reservoirs which would match the TVA.

The union, which is one of the strongest in the AFL-CIO Building and Construction Trades Union Council, believes that if billions can be spent abroad to aid other nations in similar projects, certainly similar funds should be spent at home. The expenditure of billions would, of course, not only end the threat of floods--such as the recent disaster which killed 15 persons and destroyed $200 million worth of property--but would also create scores of thousands of jobs.

This is but one bid for huge public works which soon will have the entire labor movement behind it.

Another campaign can be expected to boost a bill introduced by Minnesota's Congressman John Blatnik calling for a $2 billion public works program. As the AFL-CIO research people see it, the money would be spent for construction of museums, libraries, public buildings, repairs of streets and the laying of sewage systems.

And when the next Congress rolls around, labor again will seek the President's aid in a drive for a new minimum wage of $60 a week--and a shorter work week at that.

But first things first. And the first thing is to organize their legions behind the President, right now.

H. L. Hunt Says

WHO, ME?

A couple went to call on their new neighbors. As they entered the door, a grimy little boy playing in the yard rushed in with them. He turned somersaults in the floor, meddled into everything available, and even went uncorrected when he broke a vase and spilled water over the carpet.

Curbing her anger the hostess asked: "How old is your little boy?" "Our little boy?", they gasped. "We thought he was yours!"

We sometimes bend over backward when the Communists and atheists provoke us to wrath, thinking it is somebody else's duty to put them in their places, when that "somebody else" is wondering the same about us. If we had all been patriotic enough we would have made a concerted protest against atheist Madalyn Murray when she incited the Supreme Court to take Bible reading and prayer out of our schools, and tried to have our National motto, "IN GOD WE TRUST," removed from our coins. Instead, we did nothing until the damage was done.

American tourists tell us that every 100 miles throughout Russia, there are road signs showing their motto, and a serene, studious woman reading a big, black book, one hand on the book, the other on a child at her side. The book has taken the place of the Bible. It was written by Karl Marx or Lenin. These road signs thrust themselves in the faces of travelers advertising to the world that Russia's religion is Communism.

We want someone to do something to save our country. It is so stupid that they don't. We would do it ourselves if we could just get started.

To the readers of our columnist Victor Riesel, the dramatic labor message sent up the Hill by President Johnson came as no surprise. Mr. Riesel was ahead on this story with a series of exclusives which began as early as Mar. 12 -- fully nine weeks ago.

On that day Mr. Riesel alone reported the details of a closed-door session in Mr. Johnson's White House office attended by the President, some of his key aides, and several labor leaders.

It was at this session that the President outlined what he would and would not put into his labor message.

These were details eagerly sought by labor leaders, businessmen and the public -- since the message would affect tens of millions of people and tens of thousands of businesses.

In his March 12 column, Mr. Riesel revealed that the President had promised he would include the demand for repeal of Taft-Hartley clause "14 B"; that he would seek extension of coverage of the minimum wage law to additional millions; that he would push for double time for overtime, but he would not ask for a shorter work week.

Riesel said then that the President would urge a study of the latter. President Johnson's message completely corroborated Mr. Riesel's exclusive report.

USRLA -- RED PLAN FOR LATIN AMERICA

Defectors from the Soviet side to our side in the world conflict should be an important force. For many years, with the Naval Intelligence and with State and U. S. Senate committees, I had the responsibility of inducing wavering communists and people in the twilight of their communist careers to come over to the side of the United States. I know what a magnificent contribution defectors have made to our understanding of the communist conspiracy. They made valiant witnesses, and the whole free world was better for their testimony.

In recent years, however, the people running our executive policy have not shown the high resolve necessary to induce defections. Many of us were shocked in 1958 when we learned that a Danish international civil servant, Povl Bang-Jensen, had been approached at the U.N. by a cluster of potential Soviet defectors who asked that he aid them to asylum in the United States. The approach had been made at the time of the crushing of the Hungarian uprising by Soviet tanks in 1956.

These defectors told Bang-Jensen that the 38th floor of the U.N. (the top administrative offices) was actually under Soviet control and that the Soviet Secret Police had penetrated our Foreign Intelligence. This information was dispatched to the then head of our CIA, who, instead of zealously moving to acquire the vital secrets available from this important source, let Bang-Jensen and the defectors cool their heels for seven anguished months, after which they were no longer available.

I read in the Congressional Record of September 24 another startling defector story. It comes through an interview between the competent foreign editor of the Washington Star, Constantine Brown, and a former high official of the Communist Czechoslovak government. The defector told Brown much about communist future plans which we should know.

The defector left communism because he could no longer stand the intrigue involved. However, since his defection he had come to realize he had joined "the losing side" because the leaders of the West, mostly in the United States and Britain, refused to believe that Khrushchev is planning to conquer the world.

He told of a communist plan, blueprinted and sealed during Castro's 37-day visit this summer to the U. S. S. R. that called for the success of what is called in the Kremlin -- the USRLA -- the United Socialist Republics of Latin America. By 1968 this Soviet unit is to include Cuba, Venezuela, Colombia, Brazil, British Guiana, Mexico, Chile and Hispaniola. (This was before the overthrow of Juan Bosch.)

Castro, according to the defector, is to be the leading force, but let Constantine tell the rest:

"According to my informant, Khrushchev has instructed Castro to lay the groundwork without haste. It is essential, he is reported to have said, that the chances of re-election of the present Washington administration, sympathetic to socialism, and dedicated to a relaxation of tensions, should not be endangered. It is also important that the British Labor party, headed by Harold Wilson -- described by Khrushchev as a man of great intelligence and insight toward world trends -- should replace the wobbly, uncertain and tired Conservatives.

"Hence, there must be no hasty or rash moves by Fidel and his associates through Latin America. Castro must accept with good grace any indications for reconciliation with the United States -- even at the price of some concessions regarding the confiscation of American properties.

The testimony of this defector, properly checked, should be brought to the attention of the world, not hidden in the Congressional Record. Our official policy is working to bring about a merger with this country and the nations of the world under the United Nations. Under this, we would be a minority; but if the Latin American bloc is to be put into the Soviet side of the aisle, we will be almost a solitary voice in the consensus. By Robert Morris

The desire to save words, and therefore money, in telegrams and cables has created a form of pidgin English among foreign correspondents and their editors, the Catholic Digest has learned.

"Canst," for example, is cheaper to say than "Can You?" and the prefix "un" serves for any kind of negative.

One editor wanted to tell his correspondent that, according to news agencies, riots had broken out near Timbuktu and air passage should be booked at once. "Agencywise riots outbroken Timbuktuwards canst proceed airwise query." The reluctant correspondent cabled back: "Viewing story unfolded Tuesday unthink coverage newsworthy." The reply, however, was, "Proceed soonest." Answer: "Send $100 urgentest."

Another lazy correspondent received the cable: "Why unnews query." He cabled back: "Unnews good news." His office replied: "Unnews unjob."

No news wasn't good news for one isolated reporter. So he cabled one word: "Boo." The instalt reply: "Boo or unboo you onstaying."

One newspaper asked its reporter for the age of the Governor of his district. "How old Brown," it read. Peeved because he knew the data was available in Colonial Office ffles, the newsman cabled back: "Old Brown fine how are you."

HOW LONG IS A YARDSTICK?

A top spokesman for the National Rural Electric Cooperative Association urges that the federal government more than triple its power production by 1980 as part of a plan to provide the American consumer with an effective yardstick to measure and control power rates.

A fundamental question immediately arises. If such a plan were approved, how long would be the yardstick?

As of now, the existing alleged "yardsticks" are short indeed. The Tennessee Valley Authority, for instance, pays no federal income taxes, relatively small sums in lieu of local taxes and has various other special privileges which are paid, directly or indirectly, by the taxpayers at large.

The REA co-ops pay no federal income taxes and borrow money from the Treasury at about half the rate the Treasury must pay on its own long-term borrowings. Again, we have direct and indirect taxpayer subsidies.

So the story goes, all the way down to the municipal systems. In every case, the publicly-owned operations have important financial advantages which are denied the heavily-taxed, publicly-regulated, investor-owned utilities.

The "yardstick" concept is meaningless and worse --unless all power supplies, public and private, operate on precisely the same basis.

All our wants, beyond those which a very moderate income will supply, are purely imaginary.

You may not be able to legislate morality, as the well-worn saying advises, but it should be possible to eliminate some of the trouble people sometimes find themselves in because they acted morally. That appears to be the consensus of a group of 11 lawyers, philosophers, sociologists and others who met in a Good Samaritan Symposium at the University of Chicago.

In recent years, a number of cases in which human beings in mortal danger were ignored by onlookers have aroused the public conscience. At the other extreme, acts of Good Samaritanship have resulted in physical injury, financial loss or law suits for those who performed them.

While some countries -- France, Germany and the Soviet Union, for example--have "bad Samaritan" laws making it a crime to fail to aid persons in distress when this is possible, the symposium questioned their workability.

No law cannot ordain courage, heroism or self-sacrifice. The law could, however, provide compensation for Good Samaritans or exempt them from legal action by those they attempt to help. (In some states, doctors rendering emergency treatment are protected.)

As law professor Charles O. Gregory of the University of Virginia put it:

"I suppose there is much to be said for the old Anglo-American attitude of minding your own business--except as that the world changes, the other people's business in more and more ways becomes yours."

PROPERTY TAX STILL MAINSTAY

Although constantly on the lookout for new revenue sources, local governments still depend on the property tax as a principal revenue source, says Tax Foundation.

Nineteen years ago, total state and local tax collections amounted to $10 billion; $5 billion represented collections from the property tax, according to the Foundation's new, 13th edition of Facts and Figures on Government Finance, 1964-65.

In fiscal 1963, total tax collections were $44 billion, more than four times the 1946 figure. Of this amount, $20 billion came from property taxes.

It is estimated that total state and local government collections in fiscal 1964 will be between $47 billion and $48 billion, up 470 percent since 1946!

In the years 1946-1963, property tax collections increased just over 300 percent; collections from sales and gross receipts taxes increased nearly 400 percent, said the Foundation. Figures for 1946 and for subsequent selected years:

TAX RECEIPTS EQUAL $2,600 PER FAMILY

The average American family's share of the total taxes collected in fiscal 1964 by all levels of government approximated $2,600, says Tax Foundation, Inc. In fiscal 1963, the per family share was $2,493.

Total government (Federal, state and local) tax receipts in fiscal 1964 are estimated by the Foundation at $158.4 billion, up almost $10 billion over fiscal 1963.

PASSED $100 BILLION In 1965

As total government tax receipts move upward from the $150 billion point, the Foundation, in its new, 13th edition of Facts and Figures on Government Finance, 1964-65, points out that it was in fiscal 1956 that total tax receipts first passed $100 billion.

One of the new book's 190 tables shows that state-local tax receipts amounted to about $32 billion in fiscal 1958; in 1964 they are estimated at $51 billion.

Tax receipts by selected years, by level of government, and on a per family basis, follow:

F.Y.	Tot. (in Billions)	Fed.	State & Local	Total Per Family (in 000's)

H. L. Hunt Says

WHO, ME?

A couple went to call on their new neighbors. As they entered the door, a grimy little boy playing in the yard rushed in with them. He turned somersaults in the floor, meddled into everything available, and even went uncorrected when he broke a vase and spilled water over the carpet.

Curbing her anger the hostess asked: "How old is your little boy?" "Our little boy?", they gasped. "We thought he was yours!"

We sometimes bend over backward when the Communists and atheists provoke us to wrath, thinking it is somebody else's duty to put them in their places, when that "somebody else" is wondering the same about us. If we had all been patriotic enough we would have made a concerted protest against atheist Madalyn Murray when she incited the Supreme Court to take Bible reading and prayer out of our schools, and tried to have our National motto, "IN GOD WE TRUST," removed from our coins. Instead, we did nothing until the damage was done.

American tourists tell us that every 100 miles throughout Russia, there are road signs showing their motto, and a serene, studious woman reading a big, black book, one hand on the book, the other on a child at her side. The book has taken the place of the Bible. It was written by Karl Marx or Lenin. These road signs thrust themselves in the faces of travelers advertising to the world that Russia's religion is Communism.

We want someone to do something to save our country. It is so stupid that they don't. We would do it ourselves if we could just get started.

Inside Labor

By Victor Riesel

President Stakes Global Prestige On Labor Message

Washington, D. C.:--To keep his promise to his labor friends and allies, President Johnson has waded into the first prestige-making fight with Congress he's not certain he can win.

His move to repeal the laws banning union shops came at a risky moment in global history. Any defeat in the Congress on any major issue will hurt him abroad.

But he could wait no longer and still keep his pledge ot the union chiefs in this session of Congress. His action is a mark of his personal -- and political--respect for them and the high place they have in his administration.

He moved cautiously. He avoided the crises. He shied away from sending his labor message up during the dock and steel industries' uproars. He outwaited the scandal over the wrong count in the International Union of Electrical Workers' presidential election.

He consulted with George Meany and the labor leaders in a series of closed-door conferences and private telephone calls.

In a long intimate talk with Meany during the height of the Dominican crisis, Mr. Johnson outlined his strategy. The President wanted to avoid anything which would divert him from international affairs.

But the time had come for the move on the labor front. If the President hesitated "the season would be over," as they say inside labor. A secret poll of Congress showed that the Senate was with them--and they had a 10 vote majority in the House.

Introduction of the bills now would bring action on the Hill about July 1. Any delay would force debate to run into the climax of the steel negotiations at the end of which there still may be a national strike.

So, Mr. Johnson unloosed his proposals for slashing excise taxes. The move should keep business happy. A cut in taxes would stimulate sales on everything from cars to color TV receivers.

Then at ten o'clock the next day the press was briefed on the labor message. At noontime the doorkeeper in the House called out, Mr. Speaker, I have a message from the President. Mr. Johnson, as usual, had tried to give something to both sides.

But many businessmen are not happy. They are saying that the rest of the President's message will cost them billions more in payroll taxes and increases. And they are emotional about repeal of the "right-to-work" law.

They've been preparing for this fight for a long time. It will rage. They may beat down the razor-edged labor margin in the House.

Labor's lobbyists already are flocking in. But even as they converge on the Congress, the union chiefs are seeking new vistas. What will they urge next?

A hint of this is in an unreported telegram dispatched to the President recently by Hunter Wharton, the mild ice-cream-soda-drinking president of the powerful Operating Engineers Union. The wire urged the President to appoint a special task force immediately to begin planning a vast Mississippi River Flood Control Authority.

Wharton told the President that his union colleagues felt that a master plan should be drawn up speedily for a network of dams and reservoirs which would match the TVA.

The union, which is one of the strongest in the AFL-CIO Building and Construction Trades Union Council, believes that if billions can be spent abroad to aid other nations in similar projects, certainly similar funds should be spent at home. The expenditure of billions would, of course, not only end the threat of floods--such as the recent disaster which killed 15 persons and destroyed $200 million worth of property--but would also create scores of thousands of jobs.

This is but one bid for huge public works which soon will have the entire labor movement behind it.

Another campaign can be expected to boost a bill introduced by Minnesota's Congressman John Blatnik calling for a $2 billion public works program. As the AFL-CIO research people see it, the money would be spent for construction of museums, libraries, public buildings, repairs of streets and the laying of sewage systems.

And when the next Congress rolls around, labor again will seek the President's aid in a drive for a new minimum wage of $60 a week--and a shorter work week at that.

But first things first. And the first thing is to organize their legions behind the President, right now.

CAMP GIA VUC, South Viet Nam AP -- Some U. S. soldiers regard Viet Nam as a muddy wasteland which they hate the whole time they are here.

Others fall in love with the land and its people and try to perform a real service during their tour of duty.

This rugged, 27-year-old officer has the job of handling civil affairs for a U. S. Army Special Forces unit stationed in a key position astride the famed Ho Chi Minh trail.

He has been a one-man goodwill mission among 3,000 inhabitants of 12 straggling hillside bamboo hut hamlets. America probably doesn't have a better liked envoy than this young "Mayor of Poverty Flats."

In several weeks of whirlwind activities Lt. Damewood has done these things:

Set up two dispensaries and taught villagers the rudiments of sanitation.

Organized and provided books for a 40 people school for children who had never been in a class room.

Arranged a program under which the villagers can exchange their rude crossbows and other handicraft items for tools, cloth, blankets and hardware.

"They are also planting family gardens for the vegetables they need to vary their diet," Damewood said. "And we are also planting some 500 fruit and nut trees, and starting other projects to provide them with fish ponds and help raise the quality of their pigs and rabbits."

The lieutenant gives out 4,800 bars of soap each month. He pointed at a flapping laundry line stretched between two huts.

"You never used to see that here before," he said. "Many of the children now are brushing their teeth regularly. We are trying to get them to realize that most of their diseases are caused by dirt and lack of hygiene.

"Our theme is that self-sufficiency is the first step toward self-government. And these people show a real willingness to improve their lot.

"Our goal is to get these betterment programs going so well that when we pull out, the villager will be able to make a go of things themselves without further assistance."

Damewood's pride is the "New Life Hamlet," a community of 175 huts built from scratch to house 750 Montagnard tribesmen driven from their homes farther north by Viet Cong guerrillas.

"We provided the materials, but they put up the houses themselves," he said. "They have a wonderful spirit. You can't help liking and admiring them."

There are an estimated 750,000 of the mountain tribesmen in South Viet Nam.

"I think the future of the country may depend on whether they stay with the government or swing to the Viet Cong," he said. "These people here are staying with the government and risking their lives to do it."

Washington-Merry-Go-Round

By Drew Pearson

WASHINGTON — There is only one agency of government which has paid any attention to Gen. Eisenhower's farewell message to the American people warning of the alliance between big defense contractors, retired generals and admirals, and the Defense Department. That agency is the General Accounting Office.

During the last fiscal year alone, the General Accounting Office submitted 144 reports on improper military spending. They checked into everything from subsidizing golf spectators to squandering money on dress shoes and pants with pocket flaps.

This is the inside reason why defense contractors have pulled wires with Rep. Chet Holifield, the onetime liberal Democrat from California, and induced him to investigate the General Accounting Office. Irony is that Holifield's subcommittee is charged with policing military mismanagement and waste. It is supposed to work with GAO, not against it.

GAO's unsung accountants pursue the disappearing tax dollar through the maze of defense contracts as no congressional committee ever does. They search for hidden profits, watch for misspent money, check all the fine print in defense contracts. Scarcely a defense industry has escaped their eagle eye.

1. Fort Gordon was revealed to have been providing cutrate accommodations for military brass who come to Augusta, Ga., to watch the annual Masters golf tournament. Visiting officers are charged as low as 40 cents for a room in the Bachelor Officers' quarters, up to $2.50 for family accommodations. (Commercial rates in Augusta during Masters week run about $20 a day.) The Army also has been furnishing free transportation to the golf course, cocktail parties after a hard day on the links, and daily towel service.

2. The Navy was found to be spending an unnecessary $158,000 a year, simply because the admirals had refused to give up their brown dress shoes and wear only black shoes like the general.

3. The flap over pants flaps was caused by Army-Marine failure to settle on one style of pants. The GAO complained that it cost the taxpayers an extra $68,000 to supply trousers both with and without flaps on the hip pocket.

—THE WEAPONS MAKERS—

The GAO has been roughest, however, on the weapons makers. They have been taking the biggest bite out of the taxpayers, and one GAO report last year charged that the Navy had spent a staggering $445,400,000 with the Glenn L. Martin Company over a 10-year period, yet had not received a single serviceable P&M seaplane for its money.

The GAO also accused Bethlehem Steel of collecting $5,000,000 more than its cost figures justified for the construction of the nuclear frigate NS Bainbridge.

In another report, GAO jumped on the Aluminum Company of America for charging the Air Force and exorbitant 51 per cent mark-up for aircraft forgings. Boeing was also accused of pocketing $2,203,450 too much on its Bomarc missile contract.

—TRIBUTE TO MME. PERKINS—

The last survivor of the Triangle fire died last week. She was 83-year-old Frances "Fanny" Perkins, FDR's Secretary of Labor and one of four national figures who, like Phoenix, rose from the ashes of the Triangle fire.

That fire, which in 1911 roasted to death 145 people at their work in New York City's Triangle Shirtwaist factory, shocked the world. It also awakened the United States to horrible working conditions in sweatshops, and started a crusade for reform.

The leaders of that reform were Al Smith, who became governor of New York and ran for president in 1928; Franklin Delano Roosevelt, who also became New York governor, and was elected President in 1932; Robert Wagner, born in Germany and father of the present mayor of New York, and who as Senator from New York State sponsored the Wagner Act, the NLRB, and the most important labor legislation in history; and Frances Perkins, who became Secretary of Labor. She served longer than any other Secretary of Labor in history, and was one of the most criticized.

I was among her critics. She took the criticism philosophically, and, as I look back on her career, I feel rather mean about my criticism.

For, in the whole, Frances Perkins was a dedicated, devoted public servant. Before she died, I said so. And I salute her memory now as one of the four greats who from the ashes of tragedy built a better America.

The Modern Christian

If love is really the most powerful force in the world, where is it?

A tear is not sorrow, a falling leaf the autumn, nor a footprint the walking man. They are signs. And signs are often rich in their complexity, since they point to multiple dimensions of present, past, and future.

Each day the modern Christian sees thousands of "signs" that tell him of the upward thrust of life and the downward movement of death. A true reciprocity is necessarily involved in both.

Man is a sign of rich diversity and counter trends. Yet, the Christian has an inwardness that cannot be measured, mechanized or packaged. The functional, the lucrative, the immediate payoff, the here and now are too often the pursuit of Christians. Balance in the currents of life and death is different to come by.

The Christian person is the unique sign in the world of today. He is fully human and the Spirit operates withim him.

A kiss, for example, is a sign. It is a sign of love. The kiss of Judas was one of death. That which is behind the sign, the reality itself, can be twisted and distorted.

It is tragic when a Christian is a sign of death rather than a sign of love.

Meadow Lane Garden Club Meets With Mrs. Lennie Whitworth

Meadow Lane Garden Club met for the May meeting with Mrs. Lennie Whitworth. Present were 11 members and two guests, Mrs. Mark Weston and Mrs. L. Schuerenberg who were welcomed into the club as new members.

Mrs. Ruth Lee presided for the business meeting. Mrs. John H. Calvin, secretary, submitted information which was approved. Special reports consisted of the following: Mrs. M. H. Davis presented the schedule for the October Flower Show entitled "Time For All Things" to be given by Sikeston's Meadow Lane and Rose Gate Clubs assisted by Sikeston's Men's Garden Club. Program chairman Mrs. E. H. Weidemann presented plans for a summer workshop during June, July and August in preparation for the Fall Show and a Wild Flower trip and picnic for the members.

Mrs. Lee commended members for their community work in assisting various organizations and churches with arrangements of flowers or foliage for special occasions. Those having participated in various ways were Mrs. Lennie Whitworth, Mrs. John H. Calvin, Mrs. M. H. Davis, Mrs. E. H. Weidemann, Mrs. Lenzie Beck and Mrs. Ruth Lee, in addition to the fact that the Club had assisted Rose Gate Club in preparing table and room arrangements for the Arts Festival Banquet recently held at the Holiday Inn.

Mrs. Lee reminded the group that now is the time to start gathering plant material for dried arrangements. Also, that she and Mrs. Davis would present a Flower Arranging program on May 28 to the Matthews Extension Club, Matthews, was mentioned. The Club voted to send a letter of appreciation to City Manager Raymert Miller and the City Council for the Ordinance recently made effective banning dogs from the streets. This move will be greatly appreciated by all gardeners.

The program chairman, Mrs. E. F. Weidemann, presented a film on propogation by seed of many familiar flowers. She was assisted by Mrs. John H. Calvin and Mrs. Lenzie Beck.

For the social hour members held a "White Elephant Sale" with Mrs. Lennie Whitworth conducting the selling. Meeting adjourned with members eagerly anticipating the resuming of regular meetings next September.

When you purchase your unit from your dealer, please remember
WE RECOMMEND - - -

(1) 220-volt units if possible. (these require separate circuits usually)

(2) Notify us or have your dealer to, as we may need to install a new service or a larger transformer.

(3) Don't wait until the unit won't run; this may delay the necessary work to make the unit operate

(4) Your dealer or electric contractor can always call us, so that everything can be ready when you want service.

(5) If you are thinking about air conditioning, plan now! Don't wait until the hottest day!

(6) Our job is to serve YOU. Give us a chance to do a good job.

Cardinals Down Phils 12 to 2 Gibson Wins His 8th Straight

The swinging bats of the St. Louis Cardinals pounded 13 hits Thursday to give Bob Gibson his eighth victory without a loss this season and a 12-2 defeat of the Philadelphia Phillies.

Julian Javier and Lou Brock hit back-to-back doubles to open the five-run first inning. Curt Flood then cracked his sixth home run, Bill White singled and Phil Gagliano sent an inside-the-park homer sailing into center field.

Gibson followed that inning with a hit of his own. He took second when Brock was hit by a pitch and both flew home safely on Flood's double. Brock also accounted for another two runs in the four-run sixth when he slashed a two-run single up the middle.

Gibson, meanwhile, had a shutout going into the ninth before Tony Gonzales homered to drive in John Briggs, who had walked. But the big right-hander then retired the side and killed any Philadelphia hopes of evening the four-game series.

St. Louis, which now has won 18 times, including seven of the last eight, will send Curt Simmons 1-5 against New York tonight in the first of a three-game series. The Mets plan to use Jack Fisher 3-3.

Kansas City, which was idle Thursday, opens a three-game series in Minneapolis-St. Paul tonight. The A's Diego Segui 2-4 will face the Twins' Camilo Pascual 4-0.

Don Carr's high series at 712 was the first 700 series in league play at the new Imperial Lanes and the highest ever bowled in Sikeston District Bowling Association. Carr also had a 709 series this year in another league, to make him the first bowler in Sikeston that has ever bowled Two 700 series in one year. Carr had already bowled a 708 in 1961 at Bluff Lanes in Poplar Bluff. This makes Carr one of the few, if not the only, bowler in this area that has three 700 series to his credit.

Rudolph Takes Lead In $60,000. Memphis Open

MEMPHIS, Tenn. AP --Mason Rudolph and Bob McCallister, the first-round leaders in the $60,000 Memphis Open, are two brave men on a golf course but a lad who has been a pro less than a month had them shaking in their shoes today.

That rookie's name is Homero Blancas and he is the odds-on choice to be golfing's Rookie of the Year after just four tournaments.

Blancas, a 27-year-old University of Houston graduate, trailed Rudolph and McCallister by one stroke going into today's second round. Rudolph and McCallister both shot 65s in the first round Thursday, while Blancas and two others finished with 66s.

In his debut as a pro, Blancas picked up $2,425 for a seventh-place finish in the Houston Classic. He then tied for 16th in the Texas Open and won $875. Last week at New Orleans, he was among the leaders all the way and finished in a tie for seventh for $3,200 in prize money.

There has been no man in the history of the professional game who has started so fast.

Others at 66 were Julius Boros and George Archer.

Jack Nicklaus blew a chance to tie for the lead when he three-putted the 18th green and finished with a 67. Others who fired 67s were Dave Marr, Kel Nagle and Jack McGowan.

In all, 35 players broke par Thursday and 10 others equaled it.

Mickey Wright Leads At Dallas

DALLAS, Tex. AP --Mickey Wright has a different slant on this business of being tensed up when you start out in a golf tournament in your home town.

"It was best that I felt that way and took a bogey on the first hole," said women golf's greatest winner as she led the first round of the $14,000 Dallas Civitan Open.

"I then realized I was too much on edge and settled down."

She did, and played four-under-par after that bogey and came in with a three-under-par 68.

Miss Wright entered the second round today with a one-stroke lead over Carol Mann, who shot a 69.

Tied for third were Patty Berg and Kathy Whitworth, the year's leading money-winner with $5,764. Each had a 70.

17 Year-Old Girl Offers $1 For Yogi Berra

By WILL GRIMSLEY
Associated Press Sports Writer

NEW YORD AP--Since nobody seems to want Yogi Berra, a 17-year-old New York school girl offered to buy him today--for $1.

Maxine Siegel sent her order, check enclosed, to the New York Mets. Now she's waiting for her package.

"I don't know what in the world I'll do with him," Maxine said. "Maybe I'll take him to school and show him to all my friends."

"To Whom It May Concern:

"I read in the paper a few weeks ago that Yogi Berra was on waivers for one dollar. Since I have been a Yogi Berra fan for many years now and it doesn't seem like anyone really wants him I thought I would buy him. Enclosed you will find my check for the sum of $1. Sincerely, Maxine Siegel."

The Mets' management admitted that the letter put them in an embarrassing position.

"You see," a spokesman explained, "Yogi actually was put up for sale on the waiver list for $1, but it was just a formality.

"We hired Yogi as a coach and then decided to use him as a player. Before the May 11 cutdown, Yogi decided he wanted to stick strictly to coaching.

"To get him off the player roster we had to put him on waivers for $1. Of course, no club would grab him--it's an agreement--and he wouldn't report anyhow. We didn't expect anything like this."

"I always loved Yogi when he was a member of the Yankees. When he moved to the Mets, I became an ardent Met fan. My sister, Joyce, and I go to every night game.

"When I saw he was on waivers for a dollar, I told my father I thought it was terrible and I'd like to buy him. Father said why not. My mother wrote the check."

Maxine, a willowy brunette, said she came to love the 40-year-old catcher-coach when he was a star with the Yankees.

"He always seemed so good-natured," she added. "He was always talking to the other players. He'd make a cute toy."

"That's awfully nice, but she must have me mixed up with that television character, Yogi Bear."

Jones Out Of Indianapolis 500 With Mishap?

INDIANAPOLIS AP--Drivers and owners of cars not yet qualified for the 500-mile race at the Indianapolis Motor Speedway May 31 roll the racers out today for the final practice session before the last weekend of qualifications.

There was no more practice scheduled for Parnelli Jones of Torrance, Calif., winner of the 1963 race, who injured himself slightly and smashed his No. 98 Hurst Lotus-Ford Thursday.

X rays showed Jones had no fractures, but doctors planned to look him over again today.

Qualification was no concern for Jones and Owner J.S. Agajanian of Gardena, Calif. Jones qualified the car last Saturday at 158,625 miles an hour.

Agajanian said his crew would have the car ready to run by race day. He said the accident was caused by failure of some part of the rear suspension.

The countdown was approaching zero for the two score entrants which have not qualified for the race.

Only the 33 fastest cars in two weekends of time trials will start the race. Twenty-one cars made their qualification runs last weekend, and the rest have only Saturday and Sunday to try to make the line-up.

37 Pre-Season Games To Be Played In N.F.L.

NEW YORK AP--A schedule of 37 pre-season games, including the 32nd All - Star classic at Chicago and the annual doubleheader at Cleveland, was announced today by the National Football League.

The College All-Stars vs. the NFL champion Cleveland Browns on Friday night Aug. 6 opens the six-week schedule and will be one of nine games televised nationally. The regular season starts Sept. 19.

Cleveland will oppose the Green Bay Packers and the Detroit Lions will play the New York Giants in the Cleveland doubleheader Sept. 4. The Browns, Philadelphia Eagles and Washington Redskins have six exhibitions apiece, while the 11 other teams will play five each.

"To get him off the player roster we had to put him on waivers for $1. Of course, no club would grab him--it's an agreement--and he wouldn't report anyhow. We didn't expect anything like this."

"I always loved Yogi when he was a member of the Yankees. When he moved to the Mets, I became an ardent Met fan. My sister, Joyce, and I go to every night game.

"When I saw he was on waivers for a dollar, I told my father I thought it was terrible and I'd like to buy him. Father said why not. My mother wrote the check."

Maxine, a willowy brunette, said she came to love the 40-year-old catcher-coach when he was a star with the Yankees.

"He always seemed so good-natured," she added. "He was always talking to the other players. He'd make a cute toy."

"That's awfully nice, but she must have me mixed up with that television character, Yogi Bear."

Jones Out Of Indianapolis 500 With Mishap?

INDIANAPOLIS AP -- Drivers and owners of cars not yet qualified for the 500-mile race at the Indianapolis Motor Speedway May 31 roll the racers out today for the final practice session before the last weekend of qualifications.

There was no more practice scheduled for Parnelli Jones of Torrance, Calif., winner of the 1963 race, who injured himself slightly and smashed his No. 98 Hurst Lotus-Ford Thursday.

X rays showed Jones had no fractures, but doctors planned to look him over again today.

Qualification was no concern for Jones and Owner J.S. Agajanian of Gardena, Calif. Jones qualified the car last Saturday at 158,625 miles an hour.

Agajanian said his crew would have the car ready to run by race day. He said the accident was caused by failure of some part of the rear suspension.

The countdown was approaching zero for the two score entrants which have not qualified for the race.

Only the 33 fastest cars in two weekends of time trials will start the race. Twenty-one cars made their qualification runs last weekend, and the rest have only Saturday and Sunday to try to make the line-up.

WHY ARE SO MANY PEOPLE GETTING OUT OF CHEVYS AND INTO '65 DODGES?

DODGE PRICES!

Most folks think Dodge costs more than a Chevy. Not so! You can own a big Dodge for the same kind of money you'd pay for a Chevy! Some Dodges even cost less—look!

FACTORY SUGGESTED PRICES (See note below)
DODGE POLARA 8 cyl. 4 dr. sedan	$2730.00
CHEVROLET IMPALA 8 cyl. 4 dr. sedan	$2780.00
SAVE $50 WITH DODGE!

Prices are Manufacturer's Suggested Retail Prices and include provisions for Federal Excise Taxes and Dealer New Car Preparation Charges, but exclude state and local taxes, if any, and destination charges. All prices include a heater. All prices are subject to change without notice.

DODGE LOOKS!

This is the best-looking Dodge ever. The look is bold, but tasteful. And we don't get all chromed up as you move up from one model to another.

THE DODGE BOYS DEALS!

The odds are the Dodge Boys will give you a better deal on your present car than the guy you bought it from. Why? We want new customers. And to broaden our sales, we've got to get more people who are driving other makes to switch to Dodge. And we're ready to sweeten the deal to get them. If that sounds good (And it is) come on in—the sooner the better.

DODGE 5-YEAR / 50,000 MILE WARRANTY!

HERE'S HOW DODGE'S 5-YEAR-50,000-MILE ENGINE AND DRIVE TRAIN WARRANTY PROTECTS YOU: Chrysler Corporation confidently warrants all of the following vital parts of its 1965 cars for 5 years or 50,000 miles, whichever comes first, during which time any such parts that prove defective in material and workmanship will be replaced or repaired at a Chrysler Motors Corporation Authorized Dealer's place of business without charge for such parts or labor: engine block, head and internal parts, intake manifold, water pump, transmission case and internal parts (excepting manual clutch), torque converter, drive shaft, universal joints, rear axle and differential, and rear wheel bearings. REQUIRED MAINTENANCE: The following maintenance services are required under the warranty — change engine oil every 3 months or 4,000 miles, whichever comes first; replace oil filter every second oil change; clean carburetor air filter every 6 months and replace it every 2 years; and every 6 months furnish evidence of this required service to a Chrysler Motors Corporation Authorized Dealer and request him to certify receipt of such evidence and your car's mileage. Simple enough for such important protection.

Once Doubtful, Monegasques Are Now Princess Grace Fans

By ROSETTE HARGROVE
Newspaper Enterprise Assn.

MONACO (NEA) The story book Prince and his Princess are working it out in the best tradition of fairy tales.

Rainier and Grace, Their Serene Highnesses of this tiny principality, have children and are living happily ever after.

Once upon a time it looked as though it might not be thus.

When their prince married the American movie star nine years ago, the Monegasques looked with a certain amount of suspicion upon the woman he had chosen as his consort. They feared that Philadelphia-born Grace (nee Kelly) would Americanize the man who exercised Old World control over his 368-acre domain and would attempt to bring Hollywood to Monaco.

Grace had to learn the language and customs of her new subjects.

Rainier, Grace and Monaco all have adapted with remarkable success.

The Princess has proved herself a perfect wife and admirable mother and has assumed her state responsibilities as though to the manor born. Her beauty and elegance have brought new brilliance to the sometime rather shabby formal functions of the principality.

Two healthy children, Caroline, 8, and Albert, 7, have recently been joined by a second daughter, christened Stephanie Marie Elizabeth.

Ask a Monegasque housewife what she thinks of Princess Grace and she probably will reply—as one did—"We know now that the Princess has other ambitions than being a movie star or cover girl. She is a real helpmate to our Prince and brings up her children, as far as she can, just like any other well-to-do Monegasque family."

BOREDOM COMES EARLY to this tiny bit of royalty, Princess Stephanie Marie Elizabeth, who yawns in an unregal manner right in the face of her mother, Princess Grace of Monaco.

LIKE THE FAIRY TALE people, the Prince and his American-born Princess had many children and lived happily ever after. Shown with Rainier and her Serene Highness are Stephanie, Caroline and Albert.

The middle-aged Monegasque dames approve of Grace's lack of eccentricity or ostentation in dress. They like the way she still manages to appear glamorous, and are especially intrigued by the fact that she does not hesitate to wear the same ball gown several times in a season.

While the men generally are more fond of the brunette type of local beauty, they admire Grace's looks and approve her dislike of scandal in any form and her democratic way of shopping along the streets of Monaco afoot, and sans escort.

Grace has a real and very earnest interest in the Monaco Red Cross— of which she is president—in the problems of older people, the future of orphans and many other social service activities. She is not content just to make glamorous personal appearances in behalf of her charities, but works several hours a day personally answering letters and regularly visits orphanages and the old peoples' home.

The Monegasques were a little startled when a couple of years ago Her Serene Highness expressed the wish that Monaco's famed pigeon-shooting establishment replace live birds with clay pigeons, but her wish was their command, even though it meant a loss of revenue.

Rainier has also settled down to his responsibilities. To please his wife he has given up his racing automobiles, no longer speeds along the sinuous coast of the Riviera at 100 m.p.h.

No so long ago the Prince made an even greater sacrifice by selling his yacht, the "Albercaro".

A few years ago Rainier and Grace built themselves a model house at Mont Agel, about 30 miles away from Monaco on the French border. Planned on American lines, it has all the latest improvements and gadgets and here the princely couple spend weekends with the children whenever they can get away from affairs of state.

Julius Caesar To Be Presented For First Time

KANSAS CITY AP -- Julius Caesar, one of the many operas that spilled from Handel's fertile quill only to be overshadowed by his "Messiah" will be presented in America for the first time tonight by a professional company.

The opera's cast and production staff are internationally known and the performance has aroused the interest of the music world. Reviewers from Italy, England and many cities in this country are here for it.

Evelyn Lear, a soprano from Brooklyn who has been a principal singer with companies in Berlin, Vienna and London, will perform in her native country for the first time in eight years.

She will be Cleopatra opposite Georgia Tozzi of the Metropolitan Opera who has the title role. Other principals are Mario Petri as Ptolemy, making his American debut; Cesare Valletti as Sextus, Oralia Dominguez as Cornelia, Raymond Mickalski as Achillus and Robert Banuelas as Curio.

The director and producer is Lawrence Kelly, managing director of the Dallas Opera, who became interested in resurrecting the work five years ago. He waited for an opportunity. Activation of the Performing Arts Foundation of Kansas City earlier this year provided it.

Nicola Rescigno, an American living in Italy, is the conductor. Jean Rosenthal, whose work has stamped a number of major Broadway musicals since Oklahoma, is the lighting director.

Since Rescigno and Kelly began working on the project, Rescingo has bought every edition of the score he could find.

The opera, one of 31 George Frederick Handel wrote between 1711 and 1737, first was performed in London in 1724. Handel revised it for every succeeding production - adding, substituting and subtracting areas and ensembles to fit a particular performer. If all the parts were performed today it would take about 5 1/2 hours.

The opera deals with episodes in Caesar's life after his defeat of Pompey. Pompey had fled to Egypt, but was murdered upon his arrival, leaving his wife, Cornelia and son, Sextus, distraught and eager for vengeance.

Ptolemy rules Egypt, though by rights his sister, Cleopatra, should be sharing the throne with him. She seeks Caesar's aid in securing her birthright and also the help of Sextus.

There are plots and counterplots, a couple of unsuccessful assassination attempts and a battle between Cleopatra and Ptolemy, which leads to Ptolemy's jailing.

The Performing Arts Foundation budgeted the production at about $150,000, all privately donated. The group was formed last February to offer the community artistic performances of highest quality - and to attract attention to the city.

The opera will be performed again Sunday and Tuesday. Its score and sets then will be leased to other professional companies.

Johnson Has No Intention Of Trying to Recast World

BY BRUCE BIOSSAT
Washington Correspondent
Newspaper Enterprise Assn.

WASHINGTON (NEA) President Johnson evidently is confident he acted wisely in throwing America's power into the Dominican crisis. Yet he is said to be somewhat restless over the problem.

Some high level aides cautioned the President that, once we become enmeshed in the Dominican Republic's affairs, it might be extremely difficult to extricate ourselves. The question of "next steps" struck these aides as a cloudy business.

According to reports, it is this aspect of the matter that has unsettled Johnson a little. A comment from one source: "He doesn't like to be associated with anything that isn't going to turn out completely right."

THE NEW CRISIS APPEARS to have come along just as the President was beginning to take in better stride the buffetings from his other foreign dilemma—Viet Nam. Answering his critics, he and his helpers were capturing more attention for his side of the story.

Having been chided for too much secrecy over Viet Nam, he went the other way in the Dominican affair. In one official's view, this represents an "overresponsiveness to criticism" which in some circumstances could adversely affect the President's policy making.

However this might be, there does not seem much point in dwelling endlessly on Johnson's sensitivity to attack. As one old friend puts it:

"Let's face it. He's always been thin-skinned, and he's probably always going to be."

LATELY THE PRESIDENT has not been content simply to answer charges against the specifics of his foreign policy. He has been defending himself against the contention that he doesn't care enough about foreign affairs or give them sufficient time except when crisis compels it.

Here he gets at least a partial assist from a few administration men whose detachment has to be accepted as genuine.

The view they give is of a president who is willing enough to mix into the foreign field if there are pragmatic gains to be had—to defend the country's interests when that must be done, and advance them when it can be done.

AT THE SAME TIME, these semidetached viewers see no desire in Johnson to remake the world, to push out the frontiers of idealism, to go adventuring into the minds of many world leaders without specific intent. Says one source:

"He doesn't really expect much in this field. He doesn't think any amount of talking will change De Gaulle, or even President Ayub Khan of Pakistan. That's one of the overlooked reasons Ayub's visit was postponed. The President just didn't think he could make a sale."

Lyndon Johnson is not immune to foreign enthusiasms. He worked up a good deal of spirit over his "Mekong valley project" and general development proposals for Southeast Asia. But to one appraiser this is just a foreign transplant of his domestic enthusiasms. He adds: "The Mekong may simply be the Pedernales enlarged."

Missouri House Kills Bill To Hide Tickets

JEFFERSON CITY (AP) — The House expressed only minor interest today in a bill to keep arrest records confidential until the accused person is convicted. Then it killed the bill on a thunderous voice vote.

Rep. Raymond Howard, D-St. Louis, brought the bill up and explained it was "primarily aimed at newspaper people" to keep from publication any records of alleged crimes until conviction.

Rep. David Rolwing, D-Mississippi County, won adoption of an amendment to allow law enforcement agencies to share such confidential information.

And Rep. Don Kennedy, D-Vernon County, asked if the bill might prevent newspapers from covering trials. Howard said he didn't think it would do that.

Then the voice vote torpedoed the bill.

License and regulate sanitarians.

Raise the pay of third class county sheriffs by $2,400 a year and fourth class county sheriffs by $1,200.

The Senate passed a constitutional amendment proposal—the third one submitted to the voters by the current legislature.

It would allow cities building industrial plants with revenue bonds to sell the plants as well as lease them. Under an attorney general's opinion they can't be sold now.

Passed previously were amendment proposals to allow a governor to succeed himself and another to let St. Louis and St. Louis County solve their governmental problems with any method the voters might approve.

Passed and sent to the House were bills to abolish 36 special funds described as part of an archaic bookkeeping system and to let retired state employes participate in the employes' hospitalization plan.

As an indicator that the end of the session is in sight, Sen. William B. Waters, D-Liberty, announced that Monday will be the last day for the Senate to debate and amend its own bills.

The "battered child bill" is also on its way to the governor.

UP IN THE AIR

For the big dedication ceremony at the new airport in Los Angeles, a number of portable rest rooms were scattered around the place. Before the ceremony was due to begin, the man in charge noticed that one had been misplaced. A fellow with a fork - lift was called, and he picked one up and buzzed off with it. As he set it down in a new spot a quarter of a mile away, the door opened. Out stepped a fellow, pale and somewhat shaken but still jaunty. "Thanks for the ride," he said. — Art Ryon

John Hux Replaced As Chairman Of State Banking Board

He succeeds John D. Hux of Sikeston.

James Randall, St. Louis, was confirmed as a member of the Board of Curators for Lincoln University.

L. M. Crouch Jr., of Harrisonville, was confirmed for reappointment as a member of the state Commission on Higher Education.

Dr. Glenn T. Seaborg, Chairman, U.S. Atomic Energy Commission:

I like to compare basic research to mountain climbing in an unexplored range. Considerable preparation, training and strong motivation are required to get to the upper altitudes, even if no one stretch of the way is particularly difficult. But, once you're there, it is relatively easy to see vistas, or even to stumble across new riches.

The breakthroughs in scientific and technological achievements, like the discovery of fission and the development of the technology to utilize it, will come most surely in the field of basic research.

The view they give is of a president who is willing enough to mix into the foreign field if there are pragmatic gains to be had—to defend the country's interests when that must be done, and advance them when it can be done.

AT THE SAME TIME, these semidetached viewers see no desire in Johnson to remake the world, to push out the frontiers of idealism, to go adventuring into the minds of many world leaders without specific intent. Says one source:

"He doesn't really expect much in this field. He doesn't think any amount of talking will change De Gaulle, or even President Ayub Khan of Pakistan. That's one of the overlooked reasons Ayub's visit was postponed. The President just didn't think he could make a sale."

Lyndon Johnson is not immune to foreign enthusiasms. He worked up a good deal of spirit over his "Mekong valley project" and general development proposals for Southeast Asia. But to one appraiser this is just a foreign transplant of his domestic enthusiasms. He adds: "The Mekong may simply be the Pedernales enlarged."

Missouri House Kills Bill To Hide Tickets

JEFFERSON CITY (AP) — The House expressed only minor interest today in a bill to keep arrest records confidential until the accused person is convicted. Then it killed the bill on a thunderous voice vote.

Rep. Raymond Howard, D-St. Louis, brought the bill up and explained it was "primarily aimed at newspaper people" to keep from publication any records of alleged crimes until conviction.

Rep. David Rolwing, D-Mississippi County, won adoption of an amendment to allow law enforcement agencies to share such confidential information.

And Rep. Don Kennedy, D-Vernon County, asked if the bill might prevent newspapers from covering trials. Howard said he didn't think it would do that.

Then the voice vote torpedoed the bill.

License and regulate sanitarians.

Raise the pay of third class county sheriffs by $2,400 a year and fourth class county sheriffs by $1,200.

The Senate passed a constitutional amendment proposal—the third one submitted to the voters by the current legislature.

It would allow cities building industrial plants with revenue bonds to sell the plants as well as lease them. Under an attorney general's opinion they can't be sold now.

Passed previously were amendment proposals to allow a governor to succeed himself and another to let St. Louis and St. Louis County solve their governmental problems with any method the voters might approve.

Passed and sent to the House were bills to abolish 36 special funds described as part of an archaic bookkeeping system and to let retired state employes participate in the employes' hospitalization plan.

As an indicator that the end of the session is in sight, Sen. William B. Waters, D-Liberty, announced that Monday will be the last day for the Senate to debate and amend its own bills.

The "battered child bill" is also on its way to the governor.

UP IN THE AIR

For the big dedication ceremony at the new airport in Los Angeles, a number of portable rest rooms were scattered around the place. Before the ceremony was due to begin, the man in charge noticed that one had been misplaced. A fellow with a fork - lift was called, and he picked one up and buzzed off with it. As he set it down in a new spot a quarter of a mile away, the door opened. Out stepped a fellow, pale and somewhat shaken but still jaunty. "Thanks for the ride," he said. — Art Ryon

Fishing Conditions Rated Fair To Good This Week-End

JEFFERSON CITY (AP) — Conditions and fishing success were rated "fair to good" in Missouri by the Conservation Commission today.

Conditions by region:

Northwest — Rivers in good condition and yielding fair to good strings of channel cat and flathead catfish. Lakes clear to dingy with crappie, bass and bullheads hitting fair to good. Ponds in good condition with black bass hitting well.

North central—Rivers clearing and producing fair to good catches of channels, drum and flathead catfish. Ponds clear and productive for black bass and bluegill.

West central — Upper Osage clear and yielding fair to good takes of channels, carp, drum and crappie. Pomme de Terre murky to clear and producing fair for walleye, catfish and crappie. Sac and South Grand murky but producing fair strings of rough fish.

Ozark — Rivers off color to clearing but productive for goggle-eye and panfish and trout fishing excellent on the Eleven Point.

Lakes

Taneycomo — Clear with trout fishing excellent.

Lake of the Ozarks — Osage arm dingy, upper Niangua clear lower dingy. Glaize and Gravois arms clear; walleye and crappie fair to good, black bass fair.

John Hux Replaced As Chairman Of State Banking Board

He succeeds John D. Hux of Sikeston.

James Randall, St. Louis, was confirmed as a member of the Board of Curators for Lincoln University.

L. M. Crouch Jr., of Harrisonville, was confirmed for reappointment as a member of the state Commission on Higher Education.

Dr. Glenn T. Seaborg, Chairman, U.S. Atomic Energy Commission:

I like to compare basic research to mountain climbing in an unexplored range. Considerable preparation, training and strong motivation are required to get to the upper altitudes, even if no one stretch of the way is particularly difficult. But, once you're there, it is relatively easy to see vistas, or even to stumble across new riches.

The breakthroughs in scientific and technological achievements, like the discovery of fission and the development of the technology to utilize it, will come most surely in the field of basic research.

DO YOU REMEMBER THE FIRST TIME you rode a railway passenger train?. . . Or maybe you never have, having grow up in the automobile, bus and airplane age in which you did your cross country traveling without use of the rails.

Anyway, for some 150 Hayti first and second grade pupils, and other school children up and down the Frisco mainline between St. Louis and Memphis, it was the first time for most of them this week as they were given short rides as end-of-school trips. It was also the first train ride for one of the Hayti teachers accompanying the children.

As the Memphis to St. Louis train pulled into the Hayti station the other morning, a bus from the South Pemiscot School at Steele was waiting to pick up a group of youngsters which boarded the train at Steele for the ride to Hayti. After these passengers disembarked, Hayti's trooped on for a ride to Portageville where school buses were waiting to return them to the Hayti school. And so it went. Frisco Agent F. M. Carlock said that he had received inquiries about such trips from at least five schools in the region.

As the 150 small fry paraded into the station with their teachers hovering over them and keeping them in line, about 15 minutes before train arrival time, I asked Agent Carlock if he intended to issue a ticket for each of them.

"I'm not beginning to stamp out 150 tickets for this bunch," he replied. "I'm going to issue one ticket for all of them." The total fare for the group came to around $34, and an observation was expressed that there was some passenger revenue Frisco hadn't planned on picking up that day.

Once the fare arrangements were made the youngsters immediately tired of staying in the waiting room, so a few started slipping out and then all trooped outside to watch for the train to come in. About five feet back from the inside rail there is a white strip along the station's brick boarding platform, behind which the people are to stand to stay out of the way of the trains. The children, of course, lined up on this strip -- no more and no less, craning their necks and looking south for the cannon ball to show.

There was a ripple of excitment when some kid yelled, "here it comes" but this turned out to be a freight train rolling by the station on its way to Kennett and other points west. There was a general groan of disappointment when it didn't slow up as the passenger train.

As has been reported in this newspaper, Frisco currently is trying to eliminate all of its remaining passenger trains - including the two running daily between St. Louis and Memphis (through Hayti and other points). Some years ago they were successful in abandoning the two night trains between the two cities. The local concensus is that they will also be successful in pulling off these two remaining trains, sooner or later. So, for the school children taking their train ride on a Frisco train, it also may be their last.

POOR MAN'S TV CRITIC: Well, we're in the season of re-runs, so everyone can now do a little channel switching from time to time and see many of the programs they missed back in the regular season. If you're not careful, you'll stare at the boob tube for 10 minutes before you remember that you've seen that one, and then its too late to switch over to another program and catch it at the start. It is obvious that the TV administrators expect you to turn the set off and go outside most of the summer. If it wasn't for the ball games, news and a few other special interest programs, mine would get a lot of rest in the summer.

Tried to watch the Johnny Carson show again the other evening, which is shown in small segments whenever the network doesn't have a commercial or future program to plug, or the station you are tuned in on doesn't have some free public service announcements to unload. This would be a rather amusing show if it wasn't for the constant interruptions. Anyway, this show happened to feature Barbara Nichols, the sex symbol, among other cerebrities. Now, those who saw it, what did you think? I think she was half stoned. She appeared determined to let her shoulder straps slip off, and off and off, permitting the upper portion of her dress to sag -- and it was low cut enough to begin with. At one point they put on a commercial in a hurry so they could get her off camera long enough to cover her up. She complained about it after the show was resumed. That was when I switched off the set and went to bed. Why those chicks are constantly appearing on this show in low-cuts beyond the networks permissible limits is beyond me. What are they trying to prove? Maybe they are trying to prove the same thing that the gals who wear the topless swim suits are trying.

LAST FRISCO TRAIN RIDE? -- Part of the 150 first and second grade pupils of the Hayti Elementary School boarding a Frisco passenger train at Hayti for a ride to Portageville as the schoolclosing trip. For many it was their first train ride, and it may be their last on a Frisco train since the railroad is trying to eliminate all passenger service on its system. -- Max Sturm Photo.

Comedy Continues Reign As Most Popular Show

NEW YORK AP -- When the second week of September rolls in, network television will resume regular programming with 58 established shows and 35 new ones.

Comedy will continue to reign as the most popular form of evening entertainment - 38 shows will be designed to keep us laughing.

Second most popular is a catch-all category of "dramatic anthology" which will contain 33 programs, ranging from "Laredo" one of 11 Westerns to sudsy "Peyton Place" to "Flipper," the adventures of a lovable dolphin.

There will be a magnificient total of eight prime-time hours a week devoted to running old feature movies - four programs spanning all three networks.

Variety and vaudeville programs will fill 12 programs and 11 hours of viewing time.

War will be a popular subject for both comedy and action shows, with at least 10 programs about men in uniform. Treatment will vary from the sober side shown in "Combat" and "Convoy" to a fun-war in "McHale's Navy" and Hogan's Heroes," a new series set in a prisoner-of-war camp.

"Hullabaloo" and "The King Family," hour-long programs this season, will return cut in half.

"Hazel" and "My Three Sons" will be seen on CBS next season instead of, respectively, NBC and ABC, their old homes. Senior son Adam will leave "Bonanza"; "McHale's Navy" will be deployed to the European theatre, Gomer Pyle will get his stripe, and Samantha, of "Bewitched", will be more preoccupied with approaching motherhood than with spell-casting.

The currently thin ranks of cloak-and-dagger boys will be swelled by the addition of "The FBI," "Amos Burke, Secret Agent," "I Spy," and an uninhibited comedy series kidding all of them, "Get Smart."

Death will come to some 30 shows, among them "Wagon Train," "The Defenders," the Alfred Hitchcock Hour, "The Jack Paar Show," "International Showtime" and "The Doctors and the Nurses," all of which have been around for several seasons.

The first person to cross the Antarctic Circle was Capt. James Cook, one of the most famous seamen of his day. He boldly approached the antarctic pack with his sailing ship during his voyage of 1772-75, circumnavigating Antarctica without sighting land. The voyage helped to usher in an economic boom in the area. Soon sealers began to enter these waters. In 1790 a Connecticut ship captain made the first American approach to the antarctic and took the first fur sealskins to China.

Fission-Fission-Fussion, Fission Energy Release

By FRANK CAREY
AP Science Writer

WASHINGTON AP -- America's hydrogen weapons employ a four - stage fission-fission-fusion - fission process of energy release, Dr. Ralph Lapp said today.

The nuclear physicist provided this new wrinkle on how hydrogen weapons work after studying a long-overlooked government report which disclosed the key ingredient in the weapons is an ordinarily nonexplosive chemical called lithium deuteride.

Pound for pound, lithium deuteride is at least half as costly as the key alternative ingredients of conventional atomic weapons -- uranium 235 or plutonium.

The Atomic Energy Commission some time ago made public the fact that tritium --the heaviest of the hydrogen isotopes--is the substance which produces the explosive thermonuclear reaction of the H-bomb. It's done by a process known as fusion --joining--of atoms as distinguished from the fission -- splitting--process of the A-bomb.

The AEC also indicated that the tritium is produced by bombarding a form of lithium with atomic neutrons, or rays, in special necular reactors.

But the new Lapp slant is that most of the tritium is manufactured within the exploding bomb itself, with built-in lithium deuteride as the source.

The first official disclosure that the lithium compound is used inside hydrogen weapons was made by Dr. W. J. Frank of the AEC's weapons laboratory at Livermore, Calif.

He did so in a talk at a symposium on the "Plowshare" program--the venture aimed at using nuclear explosives for peaceful purposes such as canal digging--held at the University of California at Davis more than a year ago.

Lapp told a reporter about it today, with this interpretation of how the chemical is employed in weapons:

1. The explosion is triggered by the initial detonation of either U-235 or plutonium, forming a kind of core within the bomb. In the fission chain reaction involving either of these "conventional" explosives, atomic neutrons are released.

2. The lithium in the lithium deuteride undergoes fission, as a result of bombardment by neutrons. And this converts the lithium to tritium and helium.

3. Atoms of this "hot" tritium fuse with atoms of deuterium--another form of heavy hydrogen --contained in the deuteride component of the lithium deuteride.

4. More neutrons generated by this previous reaction cause the fissioning of uranium 238--ordinarily not fissionable except by very fast - moving neutrons--which constitutes the surrounding outer "jacket" of the bomb.

And all four steps release explosive energy of their own, the whole process taking place in a tiny fraction of a second.

"Thus," said Lapp, "you have a fission-fission-fusion-fission process--'4-F' as it were."

Dr. Frank in the original report referred to potential costs of nuclear explosives for "Plowshare" use. He set the price of U-235 or plutonium at about $5,000 a pound but said lithium deuteride costs about $2,500 a pound.

But Dr. Lapp said the latter probably could be produced for a great deal less than $2,500.

World Today

By JAMES MARLOW
AP News Analyst

WASHINGTON AP -- Do you ever get the feeling that at this moment you're standing in the lobby of history, just chewing the fat, between acts in one of the great dramas?

The world now is in the period between the Red Chinese conquest of their poverty-ridden land in 1949 and the time less than a decade away when they will have H-bombs and can deliver them.

The United States at present is taken up with its troubles in Viet Nam, trying to prevent a Communist victory in the belief it would lead eventually to Chinese domination of all Southeast Asia.

Recently the Chinese had two atomic explosions. And Dr. Ralph Lapp, a nuclear physicist who worked on the first American A-bomb but is not now with the government, guesses China will have the H-bomb in two or three years.

For China to get this far so fast has required fierce concentration of energy and resources and perhaps explains why it has avoided conflict over Formosa and direct involvement in Viet Nam.

Why be distracted if, within a few years and with nuclear power, the United States can be confronted with the grisly choice of atomic war or pulling out of Asia?

It is not stretching the imagination to think Red China will in time try to dominate all Southeast Asia, or all Asia. Just remember the attitude of the United States twoard Latin America, past and present.

Even in the early 19th century, when the American fleet could hardly defend the coast, a weak and new United States warned Europe to stay out of the Western Hemisphere, and that's still U. S. policy.

The Red Chinese would run contrary to the nature of nations and their own nature if, once they had the power, they did less than try to exclude the influence of the West from Asia where its colonialism has left a bitter legacy.

At one time China held Viet Nam for 1,000 years, lost it because of internal anarchy in China, and then picked away at it over the centuries. Later it controlled Viet Nam again.

For anyone with a knowledge of history and the national use of power it would be a dreamy condition to think the Chinese in Asia would act differently from the United States in the Western Hemisphere, other big powers in the past, and even Soviet Russia with its satellites now.

It was President Eisenhower who enunciated the falling domino theory: That once communism dominated Viet Nam, its neighbors would topple in time. President Johnson shares the theory, as he shows with his efforts in Viet Nam now.

The Japanese sought Asian domination and as a result drove the British and French out of their colonial holdings on the mainland and tried to eliminate the United States from the Western Pacific.

By their reckoning they could turn it into a Japanese lake. But the Red Chinese would have even stronger reason for attempting the same. They have more than just national ambitions.

Their ideology calls for the spread of communism everywhere until it dominates the world. If words mean anything they must be taken at their word, and they've made it clear worldwide communism is their ambition.

They have denounced the Russians for ever mentioning the possibility of "peaceful coexistence."

And if the time comes when a new and powerful China tries this, the United States, even though resisting, could hardly condemn it, in view of its own actions in the Western Hemisphere.

When some of the old and original leaders of Chinese communism, like Mao Tze-tung, pass out of the picture and the Chinese society becomes more affluent, the Communist missionary fervor may lose some steam, as it seems to have done in Russia.

But the national interests of Red China will not diminish under a new leadership or under less ideological zeal. They are basic and will remain undiminished, as they have in this country--keep outsiders out.

For these reasons the present U. S. activity in Viet Nam, and its sacrifices and anxieties, intense and important as they seem now, may turn out to be only a minor episode, or even an intermission, before the big act.

It is obvious that the TV administrators expect you to turn the set off and go outside most of the summer. If it wasn't for the ball games, news and a few other special interest programs, mine would get a lot of rest in the summer.

Tried to watch the Johnny Carson show again the other evening, which is shown in small segments whenever the network doesn't have a commercial or future program to plug, or the station you are tuned in on doesn't have some free public service announcements to unload. This would be a rather amusing show if it wasn't for the constant interruptions. Anyway, this show happened to feature Barbara Nichols, the sex symbol, among other cerebrities. Now, those who saw it, what did you think? I think she was half stoned. She appeared determined to let her shoulder straps slip off, and off and off, permitting the upper portion of her dress to sag -- and it was low cut enough to begin with. At one point they put on a commercial in a hurry so they could get her off camera long enough to cover her up. She complained about it after the show was resumed. That was when I switched off the set and went to bed. Why those chicks are constantly appearing on this show in low-cuts beyond the networks permissible limits is beyond me. What are they trying to prove? Maybe they are trying to prove the same thing that the gals who wear the topless swim suits are trying.

Comedy Continues Reign As Most Popular Show

NEW YORK AP -- When the second week of September rolls in, network television will resume regular programming with 58 established shows and 35 new ones.

Comedy will continue to reign as the most popular form of evening entertainment - 38 shows will be designed to keep us laughing.

Second most popular is a catch-all category of "dramatic anthology" which will contain 33 programs, ranging from "Laredo" one of 11 Westerns to sudsy "Peyton Place" to "Flipper," the adventures of a lovable dolphin.

There will be a magnificient total of eight prime-time hours a week devoted to running old feature movies - four programs spanning all three networks.

Variety and vaudeville programs will fill 12 programs and 11 hours of viewing time.

War will be a popular subject for both comedy and action shows, with at least 10 programs about men in uniform. Treatment will vary from the sober side shown in "Combat" and "Convoy" to a fun-war in "McHale's Navy" and Hogan's Heroes," a new series set in a prisoner-of-war camp.

"Hullabaloo" and "The King Family," hour-long programs this season, will return cut in half.

"Hazel" and "My Three Sons" will be seen on CBS next season instead of, respectively, NBC and ABC, their old homes. Senior son Adam will leave "Bonanza"; "McHale's Navy" will be deployed to the European theatre, Gomer Pyle will get his stripe, and Samantha, of "Bewitched", will be more preoccupied with approaching motherhood than with spell-casting.

The currently thin ranks of cloak-and-dagger boys will be swelled by the addition of "The FBI," "Amos Burke, Secret Agent," "I Spy," and an uninhibited comedy series kidding all of them, "Get Smart."

Death will come to some 30 shows, among them "Wagon Train," "The Defenders," the Alfred Hitchcock Hour, "The Jack Paar Show," "International Showtime" and "The Doctors and the Nurses," all of which have been around for several seasons.

The first person to cross the Antarctic Circle was Capt. James Cook, one of the most famous seamen of his day. He boldly approached the antarctic pack with his sailing ship during his voyage of 1772-75, circumnavigating Antarctica without sighting land. The voyage helped to usher in an economic boom in the area. Soon sealers began to enter these waters. In 1790 a Connecticut ship captain made the first American approach to the antarctic and took the first fur sealskins to China.

Fission-Fission-Fussion, Fission Energy Release

By FRANK CAREY
AP Science Writer

WASHINGTON AP -- America's hydrogen weapons employ a four - stage fission-fission-fusion - fission process of energy release, Dr. Ralph Lapp said today.

The nuclear physicist provided this new wrinkle on how hydrogen weapons work after studying a long-overlooked government report which disclosed the key ingredient in the weapons is an ordinarily nonexplosive chemical called lithium deuteride.

Pound for pound, lithium deuteride is at least half as costly as the key alternative ingredients of conventional atomic weapons -- uranium 235 or plutonium.

The Atomic Energy Commission some time ago made public the fact that tritium --the heaviest of the hydrogen isotopes--is the substance which produces the explosive thermonuclear reaction of the H-bomb. It's done by a process known as fusion --joining--of atoms as distinguished from the fission -- splitting--process of the A-bomb.

The AEC also indicated that the tritium is produced by bombarding a form of lithium with atomic neutrons, or rays, in special necular reactors.

But the new Lapp slant is that most of the tritium is manufactured within the exploding bomb itself, with built-in lithium deuteride as the source.

The first official disclosure that the lithium compound is used inside hydrogen weapons was made by Dr. W. J. Frank of the AEC's weapons laboratory at Livermore, Calif.

He did so in a talk at a symposium on the "Plowshare" program--the venture aimed at using nuclear explosives for peaceful purposes such as canal digging--held at the University of California at Davis more than a year ago.

Lapp told a reporter about it today, with this interpretation of how the chemical is employed in weapons:

1. The explosion is triggered by the initial detonation of either U-235 or plutonium, forming a kind of core within the bomb. In the fission chain reaction involving either of these "conventional" explosives, atomic neutrons are released.

2. The lithium in the lithium deuteride undergoes fission, as a result of bombardment by neutrons. And this converts the lithium to tritium and helium.

3. Atoms of this "hot" tritium fuse with atoms of deuterium--another form of heavy hydrogen --contained in the deuteride component of the lithium deuteride.

4. More neutrons generated by this previous reaction cause the fissioning of uranium 238--ordinarily not fissionable except by very fast - moving neutrons--which constitutes the surrounding outer "jacket" of the bomb.

And all four steps release explosive energy of their own, the whole process taking place in a tiny fraction of a second.

Dr. Frank in the original report referred to potential costs of nuclear explosives for "Plowshare" use. He set the price of U-235 or plutonium at about $5,000 a pound but said lithium deuteride costs about $2,500 a pound.

But Dr. Lapp said the latter probably could be produced for a great deal less than $2,500.

World Today

By JAMES MARLOW
AP News Analyst

WASHINGTON AP -- Do you ever get the feeling that at this moment you're standing in the lobby of history, just chewing the fat, between acts in one of the great dramas?

The world now is in the period between the Red Chinese conquest of their poverty-ridden land in 1949 and the time less than a decade away when they will have H-bombs and can deliver them.

The United States at present is taken up with its troubles in Viet Nam, trying to prevent a Communist victory in the belief it would lead eventually to Chinese domination of all Southeast Asia.

Recently the Chinese had two atomic explosions. And Dr. Ralph Lapp, a nuclear physicist who worked on the first American A-bomb but is not now with the government, guesses China will have the H-bomb in two or three years.

For China to get this far so fast has required fierce concentration of energy and resources and perhaps explains why it has avoided conflict over Formosa and direct involvement in Viet Nam.

Why be distracted if, within a few years and with nuclear power, the United States can be confronted with the grisly choice of atomic war or pulling out of Asia?

It is not stretching the imagination to think Red China will in time try to dominate all Southeast Asia, or all Asia. Just remember the attitude of the United States toward Latin America, past and present.

Even in the early 19th century, when the American fleet could hardly defend the coast, a weak and new United States warned Europe to stay out of the Western Hemisphere, and that's still U. S. policy.

The Red Chinese would run contrary to the nature of nations and their own nature if, once they had the power, they did less than try to exclude the influence of the West from Asia where its colonialism has left a bitter legacy.

At one time China held Viet Nam for 1,000 years, lost it because of internal anarchy in China, and then picked away at it over the centuries. Later it controlled Viet Nam again.

For anyone with a knowledge of history and the national use of power it would be a dreamy condition to think the Chinese in Asia would act differently from the United States in the Western Hemisphere, other big powers in the past, and even Soviet Russia with its satellites now.

It was President Eisenhower who enunciated the falling domino theory: That once communism dominated Viet Nam, its neighbors would topple in time. President Johnson shares the theory, as he shows with his efforts in Viet Nam now.

The Japanese sought Asian domination and as a result drove the British and French out of their colonial holdings on the mainland and tried to eliminate the United States from the Western Pacific.

By their reckoning they could turn it into a Japanese lake. But the Red Chinese would have even stronger reason for attempting the same. They have more than just national ambitions.

Their ideology calls for the spread of communism everywhere until it dominates the world. If words mean anything they must be taken at their word, and they've made it clear worldwide communism is their ambition.

They have denounced the Russians for ever mentioning the possibility of "peaceful coexistence."

And if the time comes when a new and powerful China tries this, the United States, even though resisting, could hardly condemn it, in view of its own actions in the Western Hemisphere.

When some of the old and original leaders of Chinese communism, like Mao Tze-tung, pass out of the picture and the Chinese society becomes more affluent, the Communist missionary fervor may lose some steam, as it seems to have done in Russia.

But the national interests of Red China will not diminish under a new leadership or under less ideological zeal. They are basic and will remain undiminished, as they have in this country--keep outsiders out.

For these reasons the present U. S. activity in Viet Nam, and its sacrifices and anxieties, intense and important as they seem now, may turn out to be only a minor episode, or even an intermission, before the big act.

In A Brilliant Match—

Bridal Fashions Wedded To Cotton

BRIDAL LACE—White cotton lace is the perfect choice for this short wedding dress. The long-sleeved overblouse can be removed later to transform the fully-lined sheath into a trousseau dress. Fabric and Simplicity Pattern 5698 available at more than 300 Singer sewing centers.

This happy combination of fashion and fabric is especially good news for the bride who plans to make her own dress . . . or for the mother who is following the long-established sentiment of sewing a wedding dress for her daughter.

As for fabrics, none are more bridal-looking — or easier to sew — than the pure cottons in the offing for spring and summer. From embroidered sheers to rich elegant laces, they adapt equally well to regal, train-sweeping gowns or short, very young-looking wedding frocks.

By selecting your own pattern and fabric, you'll have a wedding dress that's yours alone . . . created to be a very special fashion for that very special occasion.

ANN LANDERS
Answers Your Problems

Dear Ann Landers: I've known Warren a long time but he never asked me out until two months ago. On our first date he suggested that I meet him inside the movie because he might be late. He said, "I hope you won't mind buying your own ticket."

A week later Warren invited me to a concert and asked me to pick up a pair of tickets because my office is next door to the ticket agency. He said "I'll reimburse you, of course." Somehow it slipped his mind.

He asked me to select a birthday gift for his mother. I spent $15. He keeps saying, "I must pay you for Mother's gift"--but I've yet to see the money. Twice I have been stuck for taxis because he didn't have anything smaller than a $20 bill. Last night he asked me to bring an extra pack of cigarettes because he hadn't had time to buy any.

I've never known a fellow who behaved this way but when I am with Warren the skies are blue and I can hear the birds sing. Any advice for me?--DEFICIT DONNA

Dear Donna: Have you listened to those birds carefully? I think they are saying "Cheap-cheap."

Put an end to the bumming routine. If Warren disappears you haven't lost much.

Dear Ann Landers: Why do people who write a daily column insist on putting in a picture of themselves--and a picture that was made 20 years ago at that? No columnist whose mug shot I've ever seen in the paper could be recognized from his picture.

The space your picture uses up could accommodate about 85 words. I would rather read what you say than look at your face. I suggest you drop the picture, Miss Landers. Thanks a lot. --PHOTOFINISH

Dear Photofinish: The mug shots which appear with columns are printed not because the writer thinks he is beautiful, but because a picture helps a reader find the column immediately.

When my column first began no picture was used. After several readers accused me of being a cigar-chomping male I asked my editors if they would run my picture. Now, aren't you sorry you said all those mean things?

Dear Ann Landers: If you can tell me how to free myself of my stepchildren without losing my husband you are a miracle worker.

We have been married 18 months. My husband's sons have borrowed money which I'm sure will never be repaid. They come over and drive his car out of the driveway without asking. They borrow his fishing equipment, walk off with his golf clubs, then complain because the golf balls are old.

My husband's daughter carried off my steam iron last week. When I asked her to return it she said, "I thought it was my mother's." I told her the iron was mine and she replied, "I dropped it and it's not worth fixing."

Saturday she brought her three children over and said they'd be back for them Sunday afternoon. (They had made plans to go to the mountains and the sitter fell through.)

My husband says I have to get along with them because they are his kids. How can I --and still keep my sanity?--

8-BALL

Dear 8: You can't do anything about a father who is a shnook, but you don't have to be one, too.

Tell your stepdaughter to keep her pea-pickin' hands off your appliances. Refuse to allow her to dump her children on you. Let your husband know you will not allow his children to use you so shamelessly.

Parents are people--they can be right and they can be wrong. To help understand their viewpoint and to promote harmony at home, write for ANN LANDERS' booklet, "How To Live With Your Parents," enclosing with your request 20¢ in coin and a long self-addressed, stamped envelope.

Ann Landers will be glad to help you with your problems. Send them to her in care of this newspaper enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Aviation and Space Education Workshop Set June 7 - 11

CAPE GIRARDEAU, Mo. -- A week-long "Aviation and Space Education" workshop will be held June 7-11 on the State College campus, to inform and instruct area teachers in all fields of space age activities.

A number of guest speakers will conduct the workshop, which will offer one semester hour of college credit, and which will include lectures, discussions, and demonstrations.

Topics will include: "Plans and Progress in Space Exploration," "Theory and Practice of Flight," "Commercial Airline Practices," and "The Government's Role in Aviation."

Tours, demonstration of facilities at the Cape Girardeau Municipal Airport, and optional flights for participants are planned. In addition, individual and group consultations will be held on the application of aviation and space information in the classroom.

Guest speakers will include Frank G. Mitchell, Cessna Aircraft Co.; John Sorenson, National Civil Air Patrol; James T. Pyle, Laguardia Field, New York City; Robert Summers, Ozark Airlines, and J. T. Seesing and John Godwin, Jr., Cape Central Airways, Inc.

Also speaking will be Rush Limbaugh, Jr., Cape Girardeau attorney and secretary of the Municipal Airport Board; Walter Buse, chief of FAA Flight Service, Cape Girardeau, and four professional flight service specialists with the FAA here: Ralph Branstetter, Ralph Schild, John Seay, and William Herrin.

Also planned on the program are speakers from the National Aeronautics and Space Administration, another aircraft manufacturer and the Cape Girardeau chapter of Ninty-Nines, women pilots' club.

Educational authorities at the workshop will include Warren Black, state supervisor of education for Southeast Missouri; Charles House, Cape Girardeau superintendent of schools; Mrs. Marceline Jenkins, Valley Park School District, and Bryce Marsh, assistant to the president, State College.

Tuition will be $12 and fees $5. Those wishing housing accomodations will be charged $1.50 a night. Inquiries should be directed to Dr. Bryce D. March, State College, Cape Girardeau.

Some Savings Bonds Still Drawing Interest

COLUMBIA, MO.,--"Are my old Savings Bonds still drawing interest?" That's a common question being asked by bank customers these days, according to Clarence Klingner, MU extension agricultural economist.

The answer to the question, said Klingner, is "yes" if the holder's bonds are either Series E or H.

All E and H Bonds now held are still drawing interest as a result of certain extension privileges that have been given. All E Bonds have at least one extension--the older ones have gotten two.

As for H Bonds, those issued between June 1952 and January 1957 have a 10-year extension. Decision on the other H Bonds will come later, Klingner advised.

Persons holding any other series of Savings Bonds should look them over because they have not been extended. For example, said Klingner, all Series A, B, C, D, F, and G Bonds have passed their final maturity and no longer earn any interest.

In the case of J and K Bonds, the oldest of these began to mature in May 1964. However, the very last of them--those bought in April 1957 -- won't finally mature until April 1969.

Senator Allott Attacks Gun Traffic Bill

By CARL LEUBSDORF

WASHINGTON AP -- Sen. Gordon Allott attacked today the administration-backed bill to curb gun traffic. He said Lee Harvey Oswald could just as easily have purchased his rifle from a sporting - goods store as from a mail-order house.

"That gun from a sporting-goods store would have been just as deadly as the mail-order weapon he used," said Allott, a Colorado Republican, in testimony prepared for the Senate Juvenile Delinquency subcommittee.

Two days ago, Atty. Gen. Nicholas Katzenbach, testifying in favor of the bill, told the subcommittee:

"As long as I live, I can never forget that it was a mail-order rifle--sent to a post-office box, that had been rented under an assumed name, by a man with an established record of defection and mental instability--that killed President Kennedy."

Allott and another Republican senator from the West--Arizona's Paul Fannin--argued that the administration bill would penalize ordinary, law-abiding citizens without correcting abuses in the use of firearms.

Allott said he objects to the notion that the word "guns" is "a four - letter, Anglo-Saxon word with dirty connotations."

He said, "Perhaps we of the West are more familiar with firearms and therefore fear them less, recognizing it is the abuse of the weapon that is the real problem. There are legitimate uses and legitimate users and I strongly feel we must not unduly hinder these legitimate uses in attempting to curb the abuses."

Fannin said in his prepared testimony: "The regulations embodied in S. 1592 the gun bill would not prevent the determined criminal from obtaining firearms; instead it would impose severe penalties on millions of honest, law-abiding citizens."

The subcommittee also hears today from Franklin L. Orth of Washington, executive director of the National Rifle Association. Katzenbach and Sen. Thomas J. Dodd, D-Conn., the subcommittee chairman and chief sponsor of the bill, have accused the NRA of attempting to discredit the bill with false propaganda.

The bill would forbid interstate sales of firearms except between licensed manufacturers, importers and dealers and would sharply curb imports of firearms.

Thursday, Sen. Robert F. Kennedy, D-N. Y., a brother of the slain president, testified in favor of the bill, saying "it would save hundreds of lives in this country and spare thousands of families all across this land the grief and heartbreak that may come from the loss of a husband, a son, a brother or a friend."

William Phelps Elected Moderator Of Presbyterian

COLUMBUS, Ohio AP-- William Phelps Thompson, a 46-year-old attorney from Wichita who speaks in the accents of a clergyman and manages money like a banker, was elected moderator of the United Presbyterian Church of the U.S.A. at its annual assembly.

After presiding over the week-long meeting, he will serve for a year as a chief spokesman, roving ambassador, and titular head of the 3.3 -million-member denomination.

Thompson is only the fourth layman in the past 25 years to be elected moderator. He won the attention of church leaders by his service on the budget and finance committee of the church's general council, the executive committee which conducts its business between assembly sessions.

He won the admiration of the 1964 general assembly at Oklahoma City when he appeared before it as chairman of the committee and guided the financial program for the coming year through the legislative process.

Thompson won election on the second ballot at the opening session of the assembly Thursday. He had 459 votes, to 350 for the Rev. Sherman Skinner of St. Louis and seven for the Rev. E. G. Montag of Beaver, Pa. On the first ballot the count was 387, 360 and 72.

Thompson was born at Beloit, Kan., and was admitted to the bar in Kansas in 1942 after winning degrees at McPherson College and the Chicago Law School.

He enlisted in the Army in 1942, becoming an officer in the judge advocates department. For a time he was assigned to the office of the chief of staff at the Pentagon, and he was an assistant prosecutor in the war crimes trials in Japan.

Thompson joined a Wichita law firm after the war and in 1946 became a member of the First Presbyterian Church. He had been a Presbyterian since 1930. He is a deacon and an elder at the church.

In 1964, he was among the three men nominated for a vacancy on the Kansas Supreme Court, but he did not get the appointment.

Thompson and his wife have three children-Judith, 15, William W., 13, and Margaret, 10.

In an article published recently, Thompson wrote:

"My religion has acquainted me with the Judeo-Christian ethic. This provides a reliable scale of values by which goals may be identified-not only for myself but also for the social and economic groups in which I am a participant . . . .

"When attainment of these goals is deferred, as well as in times of personal defeat and tragedy, my religion affords solace and comfort.

"But most significantly, my religion provides the motivating power necessary to guarantee sustained effort toward achievement of these goals--all of which may be summarized in the realization of the brotherhood of all men under the Fatherhood of God through the saving ministry of Jesus Christ, his son."

Thompson said if he were elected it would be an obvious expression that the church is looking more to its laymen for leadership.

"I would hope as I travel around the country that I might talk with the people and receive their suggestions about the ways the laity can take a more responsible, a more active role in the work of the church."

In A Brilliant Match—

Bridal Fashions Wedded To Cotton

BRIDAL LACE—White cotton lace is the perfect choice for this short wedding dress. The long-sleeved overblouse can be removed later to transform the fully-lined sheath into a trousseau dress. Fabric and Simplicity Pattern 5698 available at more than 300 Singer sewing centers.

This summer, bridal fashions are wedded to cotton in the most brilliant match of the season.

As a result, wedding dresses for summer '65 are the prettiest, freshest styles to float down the aisle in many a year.

This happy combination of fashion and fabric is especially good news for the bride who plans to make her own dress . . . or for the mother who is following the long-established sentiment of sewing a wedding dress for her daughter.

As for fabrics, none are more bridal-looking — or easier to sew — than the pure cottons in the offing for spring and summer. From embroidered sheers to rich elegant laces, they adapt equally well to regal, train-sweeping gowns or short, very young-looking wedding frocks.

By selecting your own pattern and fabric, you'll have a wedding dress that's yours alone . . . created to be a very special fashion for that very special occasion.

Aviation and Space Education Workshop Set June 7 - 11

CAPE GIRARDEAU, Mo. -- A week-long "Aviation and Space Education" workshop will be held June 7-11 on the State College campus, to inform and instruct area teachers in all fields of space age activities.

A number of guest speakers will conduct the workshop, which will offer one semester hour of college credit, and which will include lectures, discussions, and demonstrations.

Topics will include: "Plans and Progress in Space Exploration," "Theory and Practice of Flight," "Commercial Airline Practices," and "The Government's Role in Aviation."

Tours, demonstration of facilities at the Cape Girardeau Municipal Airport, and optional flights for participants are planned. In addition, individual and group consultations will be held on the application of aviation and space information in the classroom.

Guest speakers will include Frank G. Mitchell, Cessna Aircraft Co.; John Sorenson, National Civil Air Patrol; James T. Pyle, Laguardia Field, New York City; Robert Summers, Ozark Airlines, and J. T. Seesing and John Godwin, Jr., Cape Central Airways, Inc.

Also speaking will be Rush Limbaugh, Jr., Cape Girardeau attorney and secretary of the Municipal Airport Board; Walter Buse, chief of FAA Flight Service, Cape Girardeau, and four professional flight service specialists with the FAA here: Ralph Branstetter, Ralph Schild, John Seay, and William Herrin.

Also planned on the program are speakers from the National Aeronautics and Space Administration, another aircraft manufacturer and the Cape Girardeau chapter of Ninty-Nines, women pilots' club.

Educational authorities at the workshop will include Warren Black, state supervisor of education for Southeast Missouri; Charles House, Cape Girardeau superintendent of schools; Mrs. Marceline Jenkins, Valley Park School District, and Bryce Marsh, assistant to the president, State College.

Tuition will be $12 and fees $5. Those wishing housing accomodations will be charged $1.50 a night. Inquiries should be directed to Dr. Bryce D. March, State College, Cape Girardeau.

Some Savings Bonds Still Drawing Interest

COLUMBIA, MO.,--"Are my old Savings Bonds still drawing interest?" That's a common question being asked by bank customers these days, according to Clarence Klingner, MU extension agricultural economist.

The answer to the question, said Klingner, is "yes" if the holder's bonds are either Series E or H.

All E and H Bonds now held are still drawing interest as a result of certain extension privileges that have been given. All E Bonds have at least one extension--the older ones have gotten two.

As for H Bonds, those issued between June 1952 and January 1957 have a 10-year extension. Decision on the other H Bonds will come later, Klingner advised.

Persons holding any other series of Savings Bonds should look them over because they have not been extended. For example, said Klingner, all Series A, B, C, D, F, and G Bonds have passed their final maturity and no longer earn any interest.

In the case of J and K Bonds, the oldest of these began to mature in May 1964. However, the very last of them--those bought in April 1957 -- won't finally mature until April 1969.

ANN LANDERS
Answers Your Problems

Dear Ann Landers: I've known Warren a long time but he never asked me out until two months ago. On our first date he suggested that I meet him inside the movie because he might be late. He said, "I hope you won't mind buying your own ticket."

A week later Warren invited me to a concert and asked me to pick up a pair of tickets because my office is next door to the ticket agency. He said "I'll reimburse you, of course." Somehow it slipped his mind.

He asked me to select a birthday gift for his mother. I spent $15. He keeps saying, "I must pay you for Mother's gift"--but I've yet to see the money. Twice I have been stuck for taxis because he didn't have anything smaller than a $20 bill. Last night he asked me to bring an extra pack of cigarettes because he hadn't had time to buy any.

I've never known a fellow who behaved this way but when I am with Warren the skies are blue and I can hear the birds sing. Any advice for me?--DEFICIT DONNA

Dear Donna: Have you listened to those birds carefully? I think they are saying "Cheap-cheap."

Put an end to the bumming routine. If Warren disappears you haven't lost much.

Dear Ann Landers: Why do people who write a daily column insist on putting in a picture of themselves--and a picture that was made 20 years ago at that? No columnist whose mug shot I've ever seen in the paper could be recognized from his picture.

The space your picture uses up could accommodate about 85 words. I would rather read what you say than look at your face. I suggest you drop the picture, Miss Landers. Thanks a lot. --PHOTOFINISH

Dear Photofinish: The mug shots which appear with columns are printed not because the writer thinks he is beautiful, but because a picture helps a reader find the column immediately.

When my column first began no picture was used. After several readers accused me of being a cigar-chomping male I asked my editors if they would run my picture. Now, aren't you sorry you said all those mean things?

Dear Ann Landers: If you can tell me how to free myself of my stepchildren without losing my husband you are a miracle worker.

We have been married 18 months. My husband's sons have borrowed money which I'm sure will never be repaid. They come over and drive his car out of the driveway without asking. They borrow his fishing equipment, walk off with his golf clubs, then complain because the golf balls are old.

My husband's daughter carried off my steam iron last week. When I asked her to return it she said, "I thought it was my mother's." I told her the iron was mine and she replied, "I dropped it and it's not worth fixing."

Saturday she brought her three children over and said they'd be back for them Sunday afternoon. (They had made plans to go to the mountains and the sitter fell through.)

My husband says I have to get along with them because they are his kids. How can I --and still keep my sanity?--

8-BALL

Dear 8: You can't do anything about a father who is a shnook, but you don't have to be one, too.

Tell your stepdaughter to keep her pea-pickin' hands off your appliances. Refuse to allow her to dump her children on you. Let your husband know you will not allow his children to use you so shamelessly.

Parents are people--they can be right and they can be wrong. To help understand their viewpoint and to promote harmony at home, write for ANN LANDERS' booklet, "How To Live With Your Parents," enclosing with your request 20¢ in coin and a long self-addressed, stamped envelope.

Ann Landers will be glad to help you with your problems. Send them to her in care of this newspaper enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Senator Allott Attacks Gun Traffic Bill

By CARL LEUBSDORF

WASHINGTON AP -- Sen. Gordon Allott attacked today the administration-backed bill to curb gun traffic. He said Lee Harvey Oswald could just as easily have purchased his rifle from a sporting - goods store as from a mail-order house.

"That gun from a sporting-goods store would have been just as deadly as the mail-order weapon he used," said Allott, a Colorado Republican, in testimony prepared for the Senate Juvenile Delinquency subcommittee.

Two days ago, Atty. Gen. Nicholas Katzenbach, testifying in favor of the bill, told the subcommittee:

"As long as I live, I can never forget that it was a mail-order rifle--sent to a post-office box, that had been rented under an assumed name, by a man with an established record of defection and mental instability--that killed President Kennedy."

Allott and another Republican senator from the West--Arizona's Paul Fannin--argued that the administration bill would penalize ordinary, law-abiding citizens without correcting abuses in the use of firearms.

Allott said he objects to the notion that the word "guns" is "a four - letter, Anglo-Saxon word with dirty connotations."

He said, "Perhaps we of the West are more familiar with firearms and therefore fear them less, recognizing it is the abuse of the weapon that is the real problem. There are legitimate uses and legitimate users and I strongly feel we must not unduly hinder these legitimate uses in attempting to curb the abuses."

Fannin said in his prepared testimony: "The regulations embodied in S. 1592 the gun bill would not prevent the determined criminal from obtaining firearms; instead it would impose severe penalties on millions of honest, law-abiding citizens."

The subcommittee also hears today from Franklin L. Orth of Washington, executive director of the National Rifle Association. Katzenbach and Sen. Thomas J. Dodd, D-Conn., the subcommittee chairman and chief sponsor of the bill, have accused the NRA of attempting to discredit the bill with false propaganda.

The bill would forbid interstate sales of firearms except between licensed manufacturers, importers and dealers and would sharply curb imports of firearms.

Thursday, Sen. Robert F. Kennedy, D-N. Y., a brother of the slain president, testified in favor of the bill, saying "it would save hundreds of lives in this country and spare thousands of families all across this land the grief and heartbreak that may come from the loss of a husband, a son, a brother or a friend."

William Phelps Elected Moderator Of Presbyterian

COLUMBUS, Ohio AP-- William Phelps Thompson, a 46-year-old attorney from Wichita who speaks in the accents of a clergyman and manages money like a banker, was elected moderator of the United Presbyterian Church of the U.S.A. at its annual assembly.

After presiding over the week-long meeting, he will serve for a year as a chief spokesman, roving ambassador, and titular head of the 3.3 -million-member denomination.

Thompson is only the fourth layman in the past 25 years to be elected moderator. He won the attention of church leaders by his service on the budget and finance committee of the church's general council, the executive committee which conducts its business between assembly sessions.

He won the admiration of the 1964 general assembly at Oklahoma City when he appeared before it as chairman of the committee and guided the financial program for the coming year through the legislative process.

Thompson won election on the second ballot at the opening session of the assembly Thursday. He had 459 votes, to 350 for the Rev. Sherman Skinner of St. Louis and seven for the Rev. E. G. Montag of Beaver, Pa. On the first ballot the count was 387, 360 and 72.

Thompson was born at Beloit, Kan., and was admitted to the bar in Kansas in 1942 after winning degrees at McPherson College and the Chicago Law School.

He enlisted in the Army in 1942, becoming an officer in the judge advocates department. For a time he was assigned to the office of the chief of staff at the Pentagon, and he was an assistant prosecutor in the war crimes trials in Japan.

Thompson joined a Wichita law firm after the war and in 1946 became a member of the First Presbyterian Church. He had been a Presbyterian since 1930. He is a deacon and an elder at the church.

In 1964, he was among the three men nominated for a vacancy on the Kansas Supreme Court, but he did not get the appointment.

Thompson and his wife have three children-Judith, 15, William W., 13, and Margaret, 10.

In an article published recently, Thompson wrote:

"My religion has acquainted me with the Judeo-Christian ethic. This provides a reliable scale of values by which goals may be identified-not only for myself but also for the social and economic groups in which I am a participant . . . .

"When attainment of these goals is deferred, as well as in times of personal defeat and tragedy, my religion affords solace and comfort.

"But most significantly, my religion provides the motivating power necessary to guarantee sustained effort toward achievement of these goals--all of which may be summarized in the realization of the brotherhood of all men under the Fatherhood of God through the saving ministry of Jesus Christ, his son."

Thompson said if he were elected it would be an obvious expression that the church is looking more to its laymen for leadership.

"I would hope as I travel around the country that I might talk with the people and receive their suggestions about the ways the laity can take a more responsible, a more active role in the work of the church."

Robert Russell in To Catch An Angel:

The choice of how to make one's living is crucial, for the work a man does makes him what he will become. The blacksmith pounds the anvil, but the anvil also pounds the blacksmith. The clam's shell turns golden in the brown depths of the ocean, and in far more subtle ways is a man's mind colored by the course of his life. So when a man chooses his labor, he chooses his future self.

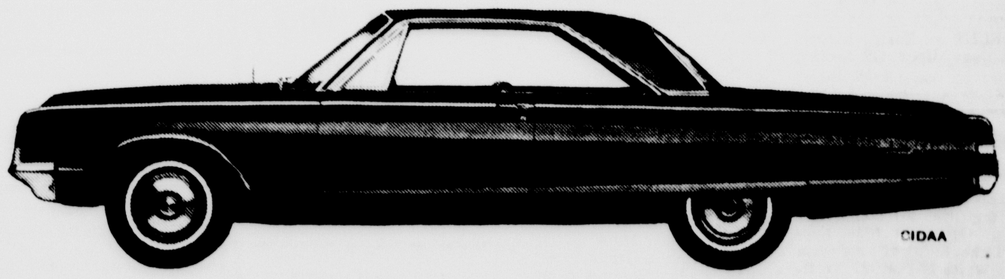
We're having a Chrysler sales success shindig! So who cares?

SALES UP 46%*

* For Jan. and Feb. 1965, as compared to same period last year.

You will . . . when you check the price, looks and Chrysler's 5-year/50,000-mile warranty†.



CIDAA

Don't miss out! Join the thousands of new Chrysler owners who have already made this discovery: 7 Chrysler models (out of a total 17) are actually priced just a few dollars a month more than the most popular smaller cars, comparably equipped. And, remember this: Chrysler still carries the longest, strongest warranty in its class—5 years or 50,000 miles of engine and drive train protection. Move up to Chrysler. It's smart. And easy.

†CHRYSLER'S 5-YEAR/50,000-MILE WARRANTY WITH THIS COVERAGE: Chrysler Corporation warrants, for 5 years or 50,000 miles, whichever comes first, against defects in materials and workmanship and will replace or repair at a Chrysler Motors Corporation Authorized Dealer's place of business, the engine block, head and internal parts, intake manifold, water pump, transmission case and internal parts (excluding manual clutch), torque converter, drive shaft, universal joints, rear axle and differential, and rear wheel bearings of its 1965 automobiles, provided the owner has the engine oil changed every 3 months or 4,000 miles, whichever comes first, the oil filter replaced every second oil change and the carburetor air filter cleaned every 6 months and replaced every 2 years, and every 6 months furnishes to such a dealer evidence of performance of the required service, and requests the dealer to certify (1) receipt of such evidence and (2) the car's then current mileage.

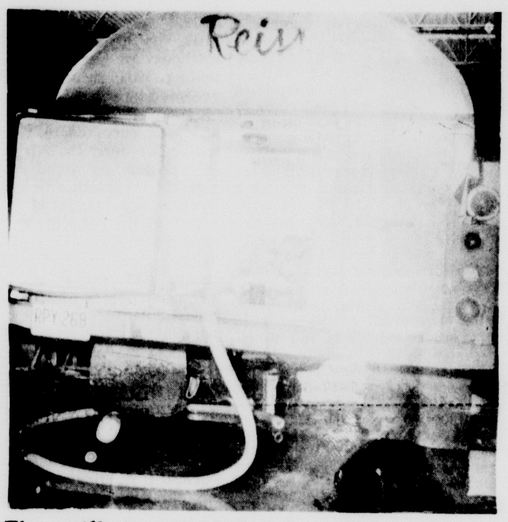
After the cows have been milked, the milk is cooled and stored in this machine until it is picked up by the dairy.



The milk is unloaded and cooled, at Reiss's Dairy, while tests are run on the milk in the laboratory.

By Don Savage
Standard Reporter

Some years ago, if you wanted to drink a glass of milk, about all you had to do was grab up a stool and a pail, walk out to the pasture, find "Ole Bossie" and milk her. Some of the old timers still say this is the best way to do it, and maybe they are right.

Milk products are still good, fresh from the farm. Perhaps now they do have a little different flavor, but that is due to the process the milk is put through for our own health. People still like homemade butter and, of course, one of grandma's most hated drudgeries was to work the churn. You could find her out back in the smokehouse in the afternoon performing her chore. It was well worth it in grandma's time.

We don't have to get up early in the morning and milk, or do the butter like grandma did. This is the question we would like to try to answer now. What happens to our milk right now in 1965?

Our cows go through a lot more now than their ancestors ever had to. Bossie still likes that green grass, but things have changed. Now she eats foods and grains enriched with special vitamins so that her milk will be more wholesome. She still spends all day in the field eating grass and soaking up sunshine.

Bossie is milked twice a day. Bossie is just like she's gone modern. She has her own modern conveniences just like you or I. Most of the milking is now done by electric milkers. All the time in our milk's process from the field to your table, we find that sanitation is very thoroughly stressed.

Our cows are washed, milked and fed all in the same process. A veterinarian checks Bossie to make sure she is in good health so disease can't be passed to you or me by her milk. A record is kept to show how much milk she is giving. If Bossie can't produce enough milk, they will find another cow that can. After she is milked, the warm milk is strained and cooled immediately. Bossie has finished her job now. The rest is up to us.

A truck comes to the farm, picks up the milk and takes it to the dairy to be processed. The milk is unloaded from the truck, inspected and weighed. Samples of the milk are taken to the laboratory where it is checked for purity and disease germs. The milk is chilled, then filtered. It then flows to another tank where it will be homogenized. Homogenization is a method of breaking up fat globules so they remain distributed throughout the milk. The milk is pasteurized. Pasteurization is a process used to destroy germs in milk. It is stored. The milk is then sealed by machines into cartons. It has it's final inspection, it is stored in a refrigerated room and sent to the store. You come along and buy it and take it home to use.

All this process from grass to the table takes less than three days. So the next time you are driving out in the country, tip your hat to Bossie, because she is the maker of nature's most perfect food.

Reiss's Dairy picks up the milk, on this truck and takes it to Sikeston where it will be processed for your protection.

Adequate Water Heater
A Must For Spring

Getting yourself into hot water isn't always such a bad deal, especially when you want just that--hot water. And this is the time of year when you need more than ever. With spring cleaning chores, additional laundry, more baths and showers, your heater will be required to supply considerably more hot water than needed in past months.

This is a critical time for heaters, reports the Plumbing-Heating - Cooling Information Bureau, because if tank capacity is inadequate for demand, the unit will not only fail to supply needs, it will also quickly wear out. "Over-used" heaters are subjected to rapid corrosion, a condition that results in irreparable damage.

In many cases, a heater has become insufficient because of an increase in family needs. A baby, for instance, requires about twice as much hot water daily as an adult. The addition of an automatic dishwasher or washing machine also places additional demands upon the unit.

The Bureau strongly recommends a spring check-up for your hot water heater. A reputable plumbing contractor will determine whether it is large enough for your needs, and whether it is operating properly.

If a new unit is advisable, buy one large enough to meet future expansion of hot water needs. Of the many models available, the "fast recovery" type is considered best because it more quickly restores the hot water supply to the storage tank when hot water is being used.

Today's modern hot water heaters are compact and may be purchased in round or table-top models. They can be installed almost anywhere --in closets, alcoves, bathrooms, kitchens and basements. For some very large homes, two heaters, separately located, give maximum hot water efficiency.

The Consumer's Beef

Consumers' preferences for more lean-type beef have led to new standards of quality for beef.

The U. S. Department of Agriculture recently announced that quality standards for beef grades will be revised, effective June 1.

Recognizing that consumers have become increasingly fat-conscious, the revised standards aim at reducing the amount of fat, or marbling, in beef. They leave the prime, choice, good and standard classification unchanged, but will change the marbling requirements for these grades.

Marbling requirements have been cut, with progressively smaller reductions for younger animals. This is a result of recent research on the relationship between maturity and the eating quality of beef.

The Livestock Division of USDA's Consumer and Marketing Service, which provides the meat grading service, explained that other factors being equal, as beef cattle mature their eating quality or palatability tends to lessen. At the same time, increasing amounts of marbling tend to improve eating quality, so official grading standards historically have called for increased amounts of marbling to offset maturity.

Resent research indicates that too great an increase in marbling has been required. This will be corrected by the new marbling requirements.

At the same time, USDA is encouraging production of the leaner beef which consumers want by instituting a separate and optional "cutability" standard. This new standard determines the amount of closely trimmed retail cuts of meat that a beef carcass can produce--an important factor in figuring costs and prices.

The quantity of waste fat which must be trimmed from a carcass to make retail cuts affects the value of the carcass. But past grade standards have not given consideration to the amount of this waste fat.

Identification of cutability differences can provide the basis on which competition may establish prices reflecting true market value. Price differentials would reward the producer of superior "meat-type" cattle, and should encourage the production of such animals.

As Secretary of Agriculture Orville L. Freeman pointed out, "The simplified application of quality grade standards will make the USDA grade mark an even more accurate and reliable buying guide for the consumer. Production of greater numbers of 'meat type' cattle can mean larger quantities of high quality beef at lower marketing costs as production, shipping and trimming of excess waste fat is reduced."

ROCKY MOUNTAIN NATIONAL PARK HAS 84 PEAKS OVER 11,000 FEET IN ELEVATION!

We have said that Rocky Mountain National Park is "all mountain!" And eighteen of them are 13,000 to 14,000 feet, forty-five are 12,000 to 13,000 feet and eighty - four are over 11,000 feet. Longs Peak, at 14,256 feet, is the park's loftiest. It is easy to understand why the crag-loving Bighorn sheep are symbolic of this mountainous area. Large herds of them are to be found here, especially on Specimen Mountain in the northwestern corner of the park. There are also elk, deer, mountain lions, bobcats, coyotes, beavers, black bear, squirrels, chipmunks and some 200 kinds of birds in this wildlife paradise. It's a fabulous flower garden, too, with hundreds of varieties including the charming and graceful blue columbine, Colorado's state flower.

Joel Estes, from whom the town of Estes Park got its name, came to the area in 1859. A few years later, the Earl of Dunraven acquired the Estes property and was, perhaps, the region's first booster. It was Enos A. Mills, however, who did the most to create interest in this many-peaked realm and Rocky Mountain became the tenth of our national parks in 1915. Every American should visit this majestic domain at least once in his lifetime!

Q—In Greek mythology, who were the Centaurs?
A—The Centaurs were the wild descendants of Ixion, who were half-horse, half-man and lived in the mountains of Thessaly.

At 8 p.m. Friday evening, the Blodgett Methodist Mens' Club met at the church, and, after a brief business meeting held a very interesting round-table discussion with Mr. Tony Heckemeyer, Scott County Representative in the Missouri Legislature.

The business session produced decisions to : (1) Have the June Cabinet Meeting on 4 June Friday at 8 p.m. BMMC. (2) Hold the regular membership meeting 11 June, Friday at 8 P.M. (3) To combine the July club meeting with the July Fellowship Dinner, and to show the official World's Fair film, "To The Fair". (4) Since this is a unique opportunity to see something regarding the fairly far away New York Fair, all persons in the region who are interested are invited to bring a dish of food, participate in the Fellowship Dinner, and remain to see the movie. (5) The meal will begin at 7 p.m. daylight saving time. (6) the date is July 9.

The club was very pleased to have Representative Heckemeyer present. And had a very interesting and enlightening discussion. Tony emphasized some salient facts, including: (1) The Representative goes to the Legislature to work for the people he represents. (2) It is important that the Scott Countians communicate to him their views regarding legislation. (3) Proper citizens should vote and vote intelligently, then follow with interest legislation in our state. (4) Bills that become law must be funded, to have any force. Some bills that are passed are never funded, and are therefore barren of results. (5) Mr. Heckemeyer undertakes to be a conservative. (6) He maintains that real estate taxes should go no higher (7) He stated that Church and State should remain separate: but that if and when good people remain silent and/or inactive regarding public matters, that bad people are likely to operate things their own way.

The sense of the club members was : (1) We desire our representatives to be possessed of intelligence and integrity. (2) We deem it both our right and our duty to inform them of our views. (4) We realize that law and legislation are so complex that a Representative must consider the views of his constituency and use his best judgment toward serving their interests, as governed by

At 8 p.m. Friday evening, the Blodgett Methodist Mens' Club met at the church, and, after a brief business meeting held a very interesting round-table discussion with Mr. Tony Heckemeyer, Scott County Representative in the Missouri Legislature.

The business session produced decisions to : (1) Have the June Cabinet Meeting on 4 June Friday at 8 p.m. BMMC. (2) Hold the regular membership meeting 11 June, Friday at 8 P.M. (3) To combine the July club meeting with the July Fellowship Dinner, and to show the official World's Fair film, "To The Fair". (4) Since this is a unique opportunity to see something regarding the fairly far away New York Fair, all persons in the region who are interested are invited to bring a dish of food, participate in the Fellowship Dinner, and remain to see the movie. (5) The meal will begin at 7 p.m. daylight saving time. (6) the date is July 9.

The club was very pleased to have Representative Heckemeyer present. And had a very interesting and enlightening discussion. Tony emphasized some salient facts, including: (1) The Representative goes to the Legislature to work for the people he represents. (2) It is important that the Scott Countians communicate to him their views regarding legislation. (3) Proper citizens should vote and vote intelligently, then follow with interest legislation in our state. (4) Bills that become law must be funded, to have any force. Some bills that are passed are never funded, and are therefore barren of results. (5) Mr. Heckemeyer undertakes to be a conservative. (6) He maintains that real estate taxes should go no higher (7) He stated that Church and State shou'd remain separate: but that if and when good people remain silent and/or inactive regarding public matters, that bad people are likely to operate things their own way.

The sense of the club members was : (1) We desire our representatives to be possessed of intelligence and integrity. (2) We deem it both our right and our duty to inform them of our views. (4) We realize that law and legislation are so complex that a Representative must consider the views of his constituency and use his best judgment toward serving their interests, as governed by

IT'S UP TO YOU
By Howard E. Kershner, L.H.D.

Private vs. Government Companies in Business

A SMALL window on the relative efficiency of privately-owned companies as compared with the inefficiency of government-operated companies has just come to our attention.

Dr. Kershner

Privately-owned Pan American Airlines operates 116 planes with 24,851 employees. Government-owned British Overseas Airlines operates less than half that number of planes with only 20 per cent fewer employees —20,783.

Pan American flew 8,069,397,000 passenger miles, as compared with BOAC's 3,023,470,000 passenger miles. Pan American flew 324,711 revenue passenger miles per employee while BOAC flew 145,478 passenger miles per employee.

Privately-owned Trans-World Airlines flew 2½ times the number of revenue passenger miles per employee as government-owned Air France in 1963.

Privately-owned Continental, National, and Western airlines averaged 390,000 to 461,000 revenue passenger miles per employee while three government-owned lines, Scandinavian, Lufthansa, and Swissair averaged about 135,000 revenue passenger miles per employee.

On the whole, one person in the privately-owned airlines does the work of about three in the government-owned airlines.

Quality Foods Around The World

Cheese from Europe. . .cocoa products from Africa. . .fish products from the orient. . . foods from every country in the world plus the assurance of their wholesomeness and good quality are in the future of American consumers.

Through the Codex Alimentarius Commission, an offshoot of the World Health Organization and the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations, minimum standards of quality are being formulated for the foods of the whole world.

These standards -- entirely voluntary--are planned to be acceptable by as many countries as possible. They are, therefore, minimum. But the door is open for higher standards in the future.

Domestic standards, formed and administered by the U. S. Department of Agriculture's Consumer and Marketing Service, have brought shopping confidence to American consumers. The new Codex standards will in a sense take consumers far beyond our own borders.

The purpose of the Codex standards is to serve as trading guides--like many of our U. S. standards now do -- enabling buyers and sellers to communicate freely and clearly. A store owner in the Midwest, for example, could order French cheese meeting the Codex standard and be sure of the quality, etc., he wanted. Likewise, his customers could be assured of the product's quality.

The "grandaddy" in international food standards work is the committee on dairy products. Since 1958 it has produced a code of principles covering milk and milk products; standards for butter, anhydrous milk fat, evaporated milk, sweetened condensed milk, dry milks; and standard methods for sampling and lab testing. All these have been accepted by some 50 countries.

A general standard for cheese has been accepted by 17 countries. Currently the dairy group is working on standards for individual varieties of cheese.

Before any standards may be added to the official Codex Alimentarius, they must pass through an elaborate system of checks and clearances. Every member country must be given opportunity to comment on the proposed standard.

During this review process, for instance, the draft for an orange juice standard was contested by the U. S. because it limited the use of sweeteners to dried sucrose. The U. S.--supplier of 80 percent of the world's fruit juices--uses various nutritional sugars and felt this restriction would hamper international trade.

Other standards in the drafting process cover food hygiene; use of food additives; fats and oils; cocoa products; processed fruits and vegetables; fish and fishery products; and meat and meat products.

Formulating international standards is no small task, nor can the Commission predict when its work will be finished. But every new standard established means consumers can buy products from around the world with greater confidence.

Hayes was president when the first Chinese diplomatic mission to the United States arrived in Washington.

IT'S UP TO YOU

By Howard E. Kershner, LL.D.

Private vs. Government Companies in Business

A SMALL window on the relative efficiency of privately-owned companies as compared with the inefficiency of government-operated companies has just come to our attention.

Dr. Kershner

Privately-owned Pan American Airlines operates 116 planes with 24,851 employees. Government-owned British Overseas Airlines operates less than half that number of planes with only 20 per cent fewer employees —20,783.

Pan American flew 8,069,397,000 passenger miles, as compared with BOAC's 3,023,470,000 passenger miles. Pan American flew 324,711 revenue passenger miles per employee while BOAC flew 145,478 passenger miles per employee.

Privately-owned Trans-World Airlines flew 2½ times the number of revenue passenger miles per employee as government-owned Air France in 1963.

Privately-owned Continental, National, and Western airlines averaged 390,000 to 461,000 revenue passenger miles per employee while three government-owned lines, Scandinavian, Lufthansa, and Swissair averaged about 135,000 revenue passenger miles per employee.

On the whole, one person in the privately-owned airlines does the work of about three in the government-owned airlines.

Quality Foods Around The World

Cheese from Europe. . .cocoa products from Africa. . .fish products from the orient. . . foods from every country in the world plus the assurance of their wholesomeness and good quality are in the future of American consumers.

Through the Codex Alimentarius Commission, an offshoot of the World Health Organization and the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations, minimum standards of quality are being formulated for the foods of the whole world.

These standards -- entirely voluntary--are planned to be acceptable by as many countries as possible. They are, therefore, minimum. But the door is open for higher standards in the future.

Domestic standards, formed and administered by the U. S. Department of Agriculture's Consumer and Marketing Service, have brought shopping confidence to American consumers. The new Codex standards will in a sense take consumers far beyond our own borders.

The purpose of the Codex standards is to serve as trading guides--like many of our U. S. standards now do -- enabling buyers and sellers to communicate freely and clearly. A store owner in the Midwest, for example, could order French cheese meeting the Codex standard and be sure of the quality, etc., he wanted. Likewise, his customers could be assured of the product's quality.

The "grandaddy" in international food standards work is the committee on dairy products. Since 1958 it has produced a code of principles covering milk and milk products; standards for butter, anhydrous milk fat, evaporated milk, sweetened condensed milk, dry milks; and standard methods for sampling and lab testing. All these have been accepted by some 50 countries.

A general standard for cheese has been accepted by 17 countries. Currently the dairy group is working on standards for individual varieties of cheese.

Before any standards may be added to the official Codex Alimentarius, they must pass through an elaborate system of checks and clearances. Every member country must be given opportunity to comment on the proposed standard.

During this review process, for instance, the draft for an orange juice standard was contested by the U. S. because it limited the use of sweeteners to dried sucrose. The U. S.--supplier of 80 percent of the world's fruit juices--uses various nutritional sugars and felt this restriction would hamper international trade.

Other standards in the drafting process cover food hygiene: use of food additives; fats and oils; cocoa products; processed fruits and vegetables; fish and fishery products; and meat and meat products.

Formulating international standards is no small task, nor can the Commission predict when its work will be finished. But every new standard established means consumers can buy products from around the world with greater confidence.

"I say, old chap, couldn't this changing of the guard be simplified?"

Today In U. S. History

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Today is Friday, May 21, the 141st day of 1965. There are 224 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On this date in 1832, the first National Democratic Convention was held in Baltimore. It nominated Andrew Jackson for president.

On this date

In 1881, the American Red Cross was founded in Washington by Clara Barton.

In 1891, more than 1½ million acres of North Dakota land were opened to settlement.

In 1901, James J. Corbett and Peter Jackson fought 61 rounds in a heavyweight boxing match. The referee stopped the bout and ruled it no contest.

In 1956, the first U.S. hydrogen bomb to be dropped from a plane was exploded over Bikini atoll in the Pacific.

Ten years ago —The U.S. Air Force started moving the first of its offshore radar islands, made of steel, to Georges Bank, 100 miles east of Cape Cod.

One year ago — Ambassador Adlai Stevenson told the U.N. Security Council that the United States could not stand idly by in the face of armed aggression in Southeast Asia.

Cape State Eases Housing Situation

CAPE GIRARDEAU, Mo.--With approximately 500 additional students expected to enroll here next year, bringing a total approaching the 5,000 mark, Southeast Missouri State College officials are moving to ease a tightening housing situation.

The College has completed arrangements with a local hotel, the Marquette, to house 84 male students on two floors of the building, at costs comparable to regular College dormitory space.

Earlier in the year, it was announced that additional students would be assigned to some of the College's residence hall rooms, rooms which until now had accomodated two students each. The action is planned to create space for an additional 400 students.

Dr. Mark F. Scully, President of the College, said that he was confident that all students would be able to find adequate housing either on or off campus, even if the fall enrollment should top advance estimates.

Hotel housing was undertaken on a trial basis, according to Dean of Students David A. Strand, who said that further arrangements might be made after an evaluation of the project. A possibility exists, he said, that more space may be used in the future.

Students living in the hotel will be in double-occupancy rooms with private baths, linens and weekly cleaning furnished by the hotel. Cost will be $8 per week per student.

Strand said that the hotel housing will operate in the same manner as the residence hall system, with total adherence to all rules and policies existing on the campus. Strand's office will assign a married couple to live in and supervise each of the student-occupied floors.

Two new 12-story residence halls, each housing 350 students, are planned for completion on the campus here by late 1966, and two more by 1968.

eyes of blue and light brown hair, formerly Girl Friday to Phenix City's mayor, then wife and mother, was now a widow at 23. Her husband Royall G. Isaacs Jr., who had made captain without living to receive the notification, was killed on patrol in Viet Nam.

Resting a moment, she looked out the trailer's window at the clothesline, the clothespins all in place. Sadly she shook her head. He had loved to use those pins for target practice with an air rifle. They were always on the ground when she needed them. But now, of course, she wouldn't need them. Not here.

"I don't know too much about his life over there," she explained, almost apologetically. "He only wrote me the happy things. If he went out on patrol he would write later only that he had had a good operation.

"I received a letter after he was killed. He talked about moving camps and that he hoped he got to stay in that camp because they had spent a lot of work on it. He wrote how much he missed us and was looking forward to seeing us again."

"He had a pet dog that the Vietnamese people gave him—that was quite an honor —and a pet monkey. He learned to sing 'The Longest Day' in Vietnamese and the children were always clustering around him to sing it. He always did. He loved children.

"He sent the baby, Sherry Terrece, a Vietnamese record with nursery rhymes on the back. I'm keeping it for her."

Firmly she snapped shut the suitcase.

"Everything happened so fast. He couldn't stand tears. I'm trying so hard for him."

The Special Forces wives are a closely knit group. When a husband goes overseas, they keep the wife left behind busy with coffees and golf and bridge and hope she won't be too lonely. When a husband is killed they rally quickly to her side.

Of Shirley Isaacs, one older wife commented: "I used to worry about her because she often said she didn't know what she would do if anything happened to her husband. She's so young. Yet she's amazed us all with her strength. She's never once broken down that I know of."

More baffling to the wives was another recent widow, who was still lying on her bed staring at the ceiling, questioning why God had to take her husband, a week after the telegram came.

"We try to tell her her children need her — one is a tiny baby, you know — but she just lies there. We don't know what to do for her, except to take care of the children. Few Special Forces wives act like that," said the wife of a sergeant.

Some widows go back home, like Shirley Isaacs. She thinks she'll probably return to work for the mayor. He had told her at the funeral that her old job was waiting for her.

Some don't know what they will do. Ei Young would like to return to Japan, but she wants her children to have an American education. Possibly she will remain in the new brick house near Ft. Bragg that her husband lived in only one month before he went to Viet Nam just before Christmas.

if possible, and we are giving every chance to those in the rebel area to surrender or to come out. But we have to take the rebel stronghold very soon, and bring peace back to the country."

U. S. military authorities announced that a Marine was killed by rebel fire Wednesday night after he and another Marine accidentally drove their truck into insurgent territory.

The body of the dead Marine, who was not identified, was returned to U. S. authorities. The other man, Pfc. Leslie Mykle of Utica, N.Y., was released by the rebels.

The Marine's death brought to 19 the number of Americans killed since U.S. forces landed in the Dominican Republic more than three weeks ago.

The Johnson administration denied reports in news dispatches from Santo Domingo that U.S. troops have been actively helping the junta force crush the rebels.

Cyrus R. Vance, deputy defense secretary, told a news conference in Santo Domingo that Pe that President Johnson's orders that impartiality be observed by American troops have been made "crystal clear" to all U.S. military commands in the Dominican Republic.

Vance added that future U.S. moves in this country would be dictated "by events and circumstances" which are not now foreseeable."

In Washington, Asst. Secretary of Defense Arthur Sylvester said American forces from the outset have been under orders to "maintain an attitude of impartiality between the junta and rebel forces." He said they have complied except when firing in self defense against snipers.

Similar denials were issued by George E. Reedy, White House press secretary, and by Ellsworth Bunker, U. S. ambassador to the Organization of American States.

In the Johnson Administration's view:

-- Some U.S. Marines and paratroopers may regard the rebels as the foe because only rebels have shot at them so far.

-- U. S. intelligence still regards Communist activists trained in Cuba and Eastern Europe as a strong influence in the rebel movement.

-- Rather than aiding the junta, U.S. forces have actually held down forays by Imbert's forces by blocking off junta warplanes at San Isidro Air Base with trucks and jeeps.

President Johnson has said Communists infiltrated the rebel movement and asserted that the American nations will not allow another country in the hemisphere to fall to the Reds. But he has been at pains to declare that the United States did not intervene in order to promote one faction over the other.

Johnson's special mission to Santo Domingo headed by presidential adviser McGeorge Bundy was reported still searching hard for Dominican leaders who would be acceptable to both sides in forming a moderate civilian regime. Such a regime would be designed to hold office until a government could be chosen in free elections.

eyes of blue and light brown hair, formerly Girl Friday to Phenix City's mayor, then wife and mother, was now a widow at 23. Her husband Royall G. Isaacs Jr., who had made captain without living to receive the notification, was killed on patrol in Viet Nam.

Resting a moment, she looked out the trailer's window at the clothesline, the clothespins all in place. Sadly she shook her head. He had loved to use those pins for target practice with an air rifle. They were always on the ground when she needed them. But now, of course, she wouldn't need them. Not here.

"I don't know too much about his life over there," she explained, almost apologetically. "He only wrote me the happy things. If he went out on patrol he would write later only that he had had a good operation.

"I received a letter after he was killed. He talked about moving camps and that he hoped he got to stay in that camp because they had spent a lot of work on it. He wrote how much he missed us and was looking forward to seeing us again."

"He had a pet dog that the Vietnamese people gave him—that was quite an honor —and a pet monkey. He learned to sing 'The Longest Day' in Vietnamese and the children were always clustering around him to sing it. He always did. He loved children.

"He sent the baby, Sherry Terrece, a Vietnamese record with nursery rhymes on the back. I'm keeping it for her."

Firmly she snapped shut the suitcase.

"Everything happened so fast. He couldn't stand tears. I'm trying so hard for him."

The Special Forces wives are a closely knit group. When a husband goes overseas, they keep the wife left behind busy with coffees and golf and bridge and hope she won't be too lonely. When a husband is killed they rally quickly to her side.

Of Shirley Isaacs, one older wife commented: "I used to worry about her because she often said she didn't know what she would do if anything happened to her husband. She's so young. Yet she's amazed us all with her strength. She's never once broken down that I know of."

More baffling to the wives was another recent widow, who was still lying on her bed staring at the ceiling, questioning why God had to take her husband, a week after the telegram came.

"We try to tell her her children need her — one is a tiny baby, you know — but she just lies there. We don't know what to do for her, except to take care of the children. Few Special Forces wives act like that," said the wife of a sergeant.

Some widows go back home, like Shirley Isaacs. She thinks she'll probably return to work for the mayor. He had told her at the funeral that her old job was waiting for her.

Some don't know what they will do. Ei Young would like to return to Japan, but she wants her children to have an American education. Possibly she will remain in the new brick house near Ft. Bragg that her husband lived in only one month before he went to Viet Nam just before Christmas.

if possible, and we are giving every chance to those in the rebel area to surrender or to come out. But we have to take the rebel stronghold very soon, and bring peace back to the country."

U. S. military authorities announced that a Marine was killed by rebel fire Wednesday night after he and another Marine accidentally drove their truck into insurgent territory.

The body of the dead Marine, who was not identified, was returned to U. S. authorities. The other man, Pfc. Leslie Mykle of Utica, N.Y., was released by the rebels.

The Marine's death brought to 19 the number of Americans killed since U.S. forces landed in the Dominican Republic more than three weeks ago.

The Johnson administration denied reports in news dispatches from Santo Domingo that U.S. troops have been actively helping the junta force crush the rebels.

that President Johnson's orders that impartiality be observed by American troops have been made "crystal clear" to all U.S. military commands in the Dominican Republic.

Vance added that future U.S. moves in this country would be dictated "by events and circumstances" which are not now foreseeable."

In Washington, Asst. Secretary of Defense Arthur Sylvester said American forces from the outset have been under orders to "maintain an attitude of impartiality between the junta and rebel forces." He said they have complied except when firing in self defense against snipers.

Similar denials were issued by George E. Reedy, White House press secretary, and by Ellsworth Bunker, U. S. ambassador to the Organization of American States.

In the Johnson Administration's view:

-- Some U.S. Marines and paratroopers may regard the rebels as the foe because only rebels have shot at them so far.

-- U. S. intelligence still regards Communist activists trained in Cuba and Eastern Europe as a strong influence in the rebel movement.

-- Rather than aiding the junta, U.S. forces have actually held down forays by Imbert's forces by blocking off junta warplanes at San Isidro Air Base with trucks and jeeps.

President Johnson has said Communists infiltrated the rebel movement and asserted that the American nations will not allow another country in the hemisphere to fall to the Reds. But he has been at pains to declare that the United States did not intervene in order to promote one faction over the other.

Johnson's special mission to Santo Domingo headed by presidential adviser McGeorge Bundy was reported still searching hard for Dominican leaders who would be acceptable to both sides in forming a moderate civilian regime. Such a regime would be designed to hold office until a government could be chosen in free elections.
